FOOTBALL.

"Spalding's Official Football Guide for 1900" is the August number of Spalding's Athletic Library. The Guide, as usual, is edited by Walter Camp, the foremost football authority of the country, and the contents are fully up to the standard. The final chapter in the book comprises the official rules as authorized by the football committee. They are presented in the same form in which they have been printed for the last two years, which enables almost any subject to be found at a glance.

Since the first issue of the Guide, pictures have formed a very attractive feature of the book, but it is safe to say that this year surpasses all previous numbers in the wealth of its illustrations. All the leading teams are represented, and many of the smaller ones, there being over 1,600 individuals shown, more than twice as many as has ever appeared in the Guide, and almost as many as have been shown since the first number of the Guide was issued.
