LECTURER SHOWS HOW MONORAIL CAR WORKS

Also Shows How a Burglar's Shadow Might Put Him to Sleep.

Reno B. Welbourn performed some amazing experiments before a wondering audience at the Auditorium on Saturday night. His lecture was divided into four parts—a demonstration of the monorail car, and of heat, light and sound. Some wonderful achievements of modern science were shown by practical experiments, accompanied by a most technical talk.

In proving that the force of gravity could be overcome by locomotion, the lecturer used a miniature model of the monorail car, built by J. Brennan, of England, and its inventor. At a speed of 3,000 revolutions per minute, the contrivance was found to maintain an accurate balance. It was the investigator's belief that a speed of 200 miles an hour would be safer on a monorail than 50 miles on the railroads of today.

A clever piece of apparatus known as a "mechanical eye" was used to demonstrate the experiments in light. By its use chemicals were exploded, and a tower of blocks was made to fall "by the same principle," said Mr. Welbourn, "the shadow of a burglar can be made to call the police or fill the room with a suffocating gas."

NO INCREASES FOR WOMEN TEACHERS

Trustees To Inaugurate Graded Salary Scale Instead.

RECOGNITION OF MERIT

Enthusiastic, Hard-Working Members of Staff To Be Rewarded for Their Zeal by Having Remuneration Placed Above Scale.

The women public school teachers of London will not receive an increase in their maximum salaries, at least before the midsummer holidays. The teachers—there are in the neighborhood of 146 of them—recently petitioned the board of education to increase the maximum from $800 to $1,000, but the finance committee, at a meeting on Saturday afternoon, decided to take no action pending the receipt of the inspector's confidential report next June.

When the communication from the teachers was read, Chairman A. M. Hunt ventured the assertion that the question had been settled by last year's board, when the minimum had been raised from $450 to $550, but no action taken on the maximum.

Should Grade Teachers.

Various members of the committee expressed the idea that there were teachers who were entitled to more remuneration than others, and desired that a salary scale be arranged on this basis. It was argued that there was no incentive for the teachers under the present system, and if the idea promulgated by the committee is carried out the teachers will be paid on their respective merits. The raising of the minimum in December came as the result of the desire of the board to offer more attractions to young and enthusiastic teachers, and the opinion was expressed at Saturday's meeting that the grading of salaries would have a great tendency to eliminate the teachers from whom the board was not securing satisfactory service.

Will Recognize Service.

The trustees hope to have a confidential report from the inspector, noting the progress made, the ability shown, and the interest taken in the work by every teacher in the city. When this is presented, the intention is, according to the feeling of the finance committee, to hand out increases accordingly. Those who get the inspector's O. K. will be recognized by the board in a substantial way, but those who fail to pass the silent examination, as it were, will be left out in the cold as far as salary increases are concerned.

Principals Want More Money, Too.

The public school principals want more money, also. Though no formal request has been made by them for increases, Trustee E. R. Dennis brought the matter to the attention of the committee, and it is expected that the principals will send a written communication for consideration at the next annual meeting of the board. The present principal's maximum is $1,600, and the opinion was expressed by members of the committee that an increase should be given to teachers with not one-quarter the responsibility are being paid considerably more money at the Collegiate Institute.

TRACES EVOLUTION OF MODERN ARTILLERY

Aymier Officer Lectures on Subject—Says Canadian Service Is Under Strength.

Major Walter James Brown, of Aymier, lectured on "Artillery" before the officers of the London garrison in the lecture room of the Armdes on Saturday night. Col. Hodgins, O. G., of No. 1 District, presided, and a good number of officers were in attendance. Major Brown, with his subject in a most interesting manner, and with a wealth of technical detail which proved of great value to the military artillerists present.

Major Brown traced the history of the development of artillery from the earliest times up to the present. Artillery, as mentioned in the Old Testament, and frequent reference was made to it in ancient history. Its original use was as a means of applying to any machinery for the hurling of heavy projectiles. The invention of gunpowder was the beginning of modern artillery. From crude cannon mounted on carriages, the demand for more effective weapons has evolved, better and better guns, until in the naval guns mounted by ships of the Dreadnought type the limit has almost been reached.

The early cannon had been succeeded by heavier guns. These had the disadvantage of being immobile, and when once in position were captured and recaptured according as the tide of battle flowed.

Then the introduction of comparatively long-range rifles resulted in the artillery becoming ineffective until the better types of guns were evolved. And so the march of progress has gone on until today in the navies of Great Britain, Germany, the United States and Japan are to be seen guns that throw projectiles weighing 1,200 pounds a distance of four or more miles.

In Canada the excellent esprit de corps in evidence at the 2nd hours service is not up to the strength it should be in proportion with other arms of the London garrison. Its excellent esprit de corps in evidence at the 2nd hours service is not up to the strength it should be in proportion with other arms of the London garrison. Carlos Alencas, of the Mexican federal army. Tests will be made, and if they prove satisfactory it was said that the monoplane would be purchased by the federals for scouting purposes.
