Archer secured the body and took it to the morgue. The remains are those of a man apparently about 60 years of age, and are still awaiting identification.

The body is about five feet eight inches in height, and is dressed in a suit of dark tweed, with a pair of cloth gaiters, one of them being stitched across the toe. Two of his upper front teeth are missing, and long iron grey hair covers his head, and closely clipped grey whiskers adorn his cheeks. In his pocket were $6.25 in cash, several exhibition cards and a copy of last week's Grip which shows that he must have been drowned since last Thursday. It is supposed that he is a farmer who had come to see the exhibition, and while wandering about the docks fell into the water, and was drowned. and was drowned.

For fall millinery go to the Mrs. Edison's Last Moments.

From the New York World. The 200 souls who made up the little namlet of Menlo Park, N.J., are in mournhamlet of Menlo Park, N.J., are in mourning. They grieve over the untimely death of Mrs. Mary Stillwell Edison, wife of Thomas A. Edison, the famous electrical inventor. To the casual observer Mrs. Edison presented a picture of health. Her face, full and rounded and of a handsome contour, was well set on by bright, sparkling blue eyes. She was not tall, although she weighed in the neighborhood of 200 pounds; but the flesh was so well distributed that if anything it added to her striking beauty. Since the birth of her last child, six years ago, Mrs. Edison seldom enjoyed a day from pain. She suffered from obstinate neuralgis, that refused all manner of treatment. The best physicians were called in, but their remecies proved useless. The scenes during her last moments were truly pathetic. Mr. Edison standing close to the doctors, who checked off the last beats of the pulse as the heart flickered, waited heroically for the fatal moment, when the physician folded the motionless arms across the bosom and tremulously said:

"She is beyond all human aid." Mr. Edison silently drew forth a cabinet and instantly a powerful current of electricity responded to his will. For two hours he kept life from fleeting, but at last he appreciated that his science, like that of the doctors, was powerless. Taking his children by the hand he led them into his study. There he remained a long time, and when he came out his blue eyes glistened, and the lids were red and swollen. ing. They grieve over the untimely death

Bodily Location of Human Happiness.

Dr. B. W. Richardson, in the Asclepiad, treating of felicity as a sanitary research, observes: "The centre of the emotion of felicity is not in the brain. The centre is in the vital nervous system, in the great ganglia of the sympathetic, lying not in the cerebro-spinal cavities, but in the cavities of the body itself, near the stumach and in the heart. We know where the glow which indicates felicity is felt, and our poets have ever described it with perfect truthfulness as in the breast. It comes as a fire kindling there. No living being ever felt happy in the head; everybody who has felt felicity has felt if from within the body. We know, again, where the depression of misery is located; our physicians of all time have defined that, and have named the disease of misery from its local seat. The man who is miserable is a hypochondriac; his affection is seated under the lower ribs. No man ever felt misery, in treating of felicity as a sanitary research fairs, Wednesday; Thursday and Friday will be decidedly fine, Wednesday morning may be cloudy and showery in Ottawa.

Mr. Cartoll Ryan of the Ottawa Sun has a libel suit on hand, He said something in his paper reflecting on Mr. J. T. Hawke, editor of the Free Press, and the lower ribs. No man ever felt misery, in the head. Every man who has felt misery knows that it springs from the body, speaks of it as an exhaustion, a sinking there. yesterday. His owner, Patrick Langley, a laborer, was arrested for intoxication and the dog had followed him to the station house and thene to court. Langley stood beside the mastiff.

"Your master drinks too much," said Justice Duffy to the dog. The intelligent animal gave an affirmative bark and wagged his bushy tail sorrowfully.

When the court remarked that the mastiff was the more intelligent of the twain, and that he would lock Langley up, the animal raised his fore feet in a prayerful manner and whined piteously.

"Do you want me to let him go?" asked his honor.

"Do you want me to let him go? asked his honor.

The mastiff barked loudly, frisked playfully about, and ended by standing erect on his hind legs, putting a paw on Langley's and and looking at the justice.

"Take him home—you are discharged, Langley," said the court.

The mastiff wagged his caudal appendage, gratefully and trotted out of court through a gauntlet of caresses from the occupants of the benches.
