JOGGING ALONG

Here and there, now and again

Just as the chance occurs ; To this one a smile and to that one a word, And a dollar where things are worse

So we jog along, amid sun or rain, Through the streets and the lanes of life; With a lift to the laden, a cheer to the weak And right where the wrong is rife.

All else is vain, for no after pain, Can the hard thing undo or unsay And no human foot may to-morrow walk, O'er the prints it may make to-day.

So our feet beat time to a glad refrain, Of love and good will to all; As we jog along, making life a song,

Wherever our lots may fall. NEW YORK, Nov. 23 .- A heavy gale pre Here and there, now and again, ailed in this section to-night, seriously Just as the chance occurs ;
