LAST week's Literary Digest was an interesting number inasmuch as the printing was concerned. The typesetters being on strike the publishers produced the issue by simply having the literary matter reproduced on ordinary typewriters. These typewritten pages were then converted into photogravures, by the same process that photographs are regularly reproduced in the newspapers and magazines. The result is not so satisfactory to the reader as is the printed page, but it must be admitted that it is an excellent substitute.

The Late Miss Mary A. Waugh

The citizens of Watford were shocked to learn on Monday morning of this week, Oct. 27th, of the very sudden death of Miss Mary A. Waugh, teacher on the public school staff here. Miss Waugh had been enjoying her usual health and had carried on her duties in the school, in the church and in the home till the very last. On Sunday morning she was in her accustomed place in the Methodist church and again in the afternoon at the Sunday School where she taught the Utopia Bible class of which she was the efficient and much beloved teacher. In the evening she remained quietly at home. She had her two sisters prepared early for bed. She had scarcely laid down when suddenly and without the least warning she was stricken by the bursting of a blood vessel in the head. Medical aid was immediately summoned but to no avail. She very soon lapsed into unconsciousness and passed away about 3 a. m., less than six hours after she had retired, apparently in perfect health. Miss Waugh was a daughter of the late Henry and Christena Waugh, very highly esteemed citizens who spent most of their married life in Warwick township. She is survived by five sisters, Mrs. J. Temple, of Watford; Mrs. D. Falloon, of Warwick; Mrs. Marshall Pegg of Tupperville, and Misses Lena and Tena at home, also two brothers, Dr. Fred and John, both of Imperial, Sask. Dec. 21st, 1865. She qualified as a teacher and followed that profession for nearly 34 years during which time she taught at Utotexer, Matlock, Wanstead, Brooke, Warwick village, and for the past ten years in Watford public school. In every section she was held in the highest esteem not only as a teacher of marked ability and success, but as a woman of wonderful strength of character. While Miss Waugh was still a very young girl she was converted to God and became a member of the Methodist church. She was a most beautiful christian and a consistent member of the church of her choice where she gave constant and noble service and very generous support. She was interested in every department of the church's work, and especially identified with the Sunday School as teacher and the Epworth League, of which she had frequently been president. At the time of her death she held the office of Sec.-Treas., of the Strathroy District Epworth League. She was the friend of all, the counsellor of many, the cherished companion of young and middle-aged alike, the inspiration especially of her Utopia Bible class of young ladies, the comfort and mainstay of the home. "She ceased at once to labor and to live." Surely "In the midst of life we are in death." It may be truly said that "She rests from her labors and her works do follow her." The funeral service will be held on Friday afternoon from her late home on John street. Service at 1:30 o'clock. Interment in the family plot at the Methodist cemetery, Warwick Village. Services will be in charge of her pastor, Rev. A. C. Tiffin.

Anthony Gilroy, one of Alvinston's oldest and most respected citizens, died on Thursday last after an illness of several months. He was 89 years old and is survived by his wife, two sons and one daughter.
