England's Street Lights and the War
One of the many inconveniences that England has to endure on account of the present war is a shortage of electric light carbon. This has become so serious in some localities that in several towns are no longer used for street lighting, and one town lights its lamps only on Saturday nights, which is the shopping night. Before the war carbons were largely imported from Germany and also from a factory at Nancy in France. As these sources of supply have been cut off the price of carbon has mounted materially.

May Mean Peace For a Thousand Years

(The Bishop of London.)
LONDON, November 7.—The Bishop of London, in an interview with a New York Times correspondent today, asserted that if England should win in the war, it might mean peace for a thousand years. He said he believed England was fighting America's fight as well as her own, and for that reason should get unstinted sympathy from America. The Bishop said:
"I am speaking to you both as a Christian and an Englishman. This is a great day of God, and among the things to be decided is the fate of the British Empire, which also involves the future of America. When I was over there I found we were more than cousins, we are brethren, and England is really fighting America's battle."
"As an Englishman I would rather die than see England a German Province, and as a Christian I would rather die than see the Germans' new God, might is right, prevail."
The Bishop said that England had her faults, but that she had tried to carry out the ideas of the New Testament, such as abide by her treaties and protecting weaker nations. He added:
"Our word is our bond. So enormous is the stake in this war that we must fight with iron sacrifice. It is a crisis of the world's history. To lose would be to lose all that is worth having in the world. To win may mean peace for a thousand years. We must show fortitude, as when such a defeat as that in the Pacific faces us."
It is the opinion of the Bishop that the only hatred felt in England for Germany was for the spirit of militarism, the "Kaiser spirit," whereas, he pointed out, Germany herself hated the English nation. He went on:
"We are a nation of gentlemen, who show chivalry to women and children and have the spirit of forgiveness. We must be above hate. We must fight our battle with majesty, which is with bigness of soul, and when the gospel of might is right is crushed, we may be better friends with the poorer classes of Germany than ever before."
The Bishop was dressed in khaki. He has taken a conspicuous part in the recruiting work, and an appeal he made in two territorial camps resulted in six battalions volunteering for foreign service. For this he received the thanks of the commander-in-chief. The Bishop said he was to address a recruiting meeting today and remarked, "I hope to obtain 1,000 recruits."

How a Submarine Dives

The submarine submerges or rises by the use of water ballast. When travelling on the surface, her tanks are empty; so that the vessel is in her most buoyant condition. As the margin of buoyancy is small, a submarine's tanks, when filled, only submerge her "a wash"; that is to say her back is almost flush with the surface of the water. The propellers and the rudders do the diving for her. The horizontal rudders are turned down when the submarine is going at full speed, and down she dives.

Government War Orders

Some lines of business have become active and profitable as a result of the present war, says the Trade Bulletin under date of October 20th. Some of our boot and shoe manufacturing concerns have received orders for footwear, which they are executing in the greatest haste for our soldiers at the front. Our knitting mills are also running full time in turning out hosiery and other warm clothing to meet the requirements of our men at the front in braving the rigors of the coming winter. Canned meats have also been requisitioned for the army in the field, and other necessities of warfare. The flour milling interests are likewise benefiting by the large orders they are turning out, whilst the farmers are reaping a rich harvest in supplying hay for the cavalry at present high prices. And whilst our Government is doing its best to provide for the comfort of those who are fighting for the very existence of the Empire, by a strange and grim irony, a vessel is leaving port this week with 37,000 bags of quicklime to provide for the rapid disintegration of the bodies of the heroes who fall in battle. What a commentary on the art of war, and the continuation of the German militarists that might is right, and that the object of the present bloody strife involving the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of human lives, besides the destruction of millions and tens of millions worth of property, is for the sole purpose of robbing the British Empire of its rich heritage of freedom for all its people, and giving German arbitrary rule "a place in the Sun."

A certain old gentleman's lack of "polish" is a sad trial to his eldest daughter. Not long ago the family were gathered in the library one of the windows of which was open. "That air—" the father began, but was quickly interrupted. "Father, dear, don't say that air—say 'that there'!" the daughter admonished.
"Well, this air—" he again attempted but was quickly brought to a halt.
"Nor 'this here' this here, is correct," he was told.
The old gentleman rose with an angry snort. "Look here, Mary," he said: "Of course I know you have been to school and all that, but I reckon I know what I want to say, and I am going to say it. I believe I feel cold in this ear from that air, and I'm going to shut the window!"
