The primary focus of this new page from Information Services will be a bibliography covering the four areas of the Institute's mandate — arms control, disarmament, defence and conflict resolution. Items selected are from the Institute library's in-house database of its holdings, and will have been received within the last quarter.

The selection emphasizes materials that are unique and not always found readily in standard readings. Items will be chosen for their strength of analysis, for their uniqueness of perspective (geographical or ideological), or for their unpublished origins. Non-academic items, or items advocating different points of view will also be included if their substance adds to a fuller understanding of an issue. In addition, this page will keep readers informed of Information Services' resources and activities, and include items on various aspects of information resources.

Profile of the Institute Library

■ The Institute library was set up in 1985. It contains a specialized collection of materials, including government, embassy and international organizations documents; ephemeral and unpublished items; and publications from organizations worldwide. An in-house computerized database covers the library's holdings, plus a variety of other bibliographies related to the areas of the mandate.

Computer searches are done on request. There is no charge.

The library is located at 360 Albert Street, 9th Floor, in Ottawa; and is open to the public from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. The collection is only available on the premises, although photocopies can be mailed, and books can be borrowed through interlibrary loan. Requests are taken in person, by telephone, mail and electronic mail (Envoy: CIIPS, Web: CIIPS, Inet: C.I.I.P.S.).

The Peace and Security Thesaurus was developed to provide a subject terminology to use in classifying materials in the collection. It is freely available to groups wishing to use it to catalogue their own peace and security collections. Please address inquiries to: Thesaurus, Information Services, c/o the Institute.
