[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, April 20.—A strong drive is amount when it came up for consideration and only half was then permitted to go through. Such reluctance may not be considered consistent with the proposal to increase indemnities.

A third difficulty lies in the refusal of further gratuities to returned soldiers. Whatever the merits of the members' claims for increased allow-ances—and they certainly have merits in these days of high prices—it is doubtful whether under the circum-stances it would be wise politics to obvious that this method cannot be resulted $5,000 in 1919, but it is fairly obvious that this method cannot be resulted $5,000 in 2019, but it is fairly obvious that this method cannot be resulted $5,000 in 2019, but it is fairly obvious that this method cannot be resulted $5,000 in 2019, but it is fairly obvious that this method cannot be resulted $5,000 in 2019 in the soldiers' demand.

sorted to too often, and members are of the opinion that the best and most of the opinion that the best and most honest way is to increase the indemnities, say, to $4,000.

There are several difficulties in the way, however. In the first place, an increase in the sessional indemnities of members of the Commons, who are fairly regular in their duties, would also involve an increase in those of the senators, whose toll is fitful, and whose duties by no means onerous. That chamber since the session commenced has been empty the greater part of the time, and recesses are more frequent than sittings.

One of Difficulties. nest way is to increase the indemies, say, to $4,000.

The suggestion has been made that the present Parliament absolve itself frequent than sittings.

One of Difficulties.

A further difficulty lies in the fact that while twelve and a half million dollars has been appropriated for bonuses to the civil servants, the House priving them of whatever unpopularity may accrue from sessional increases. In the meantime, however, it is intimated that during the present session provision will be made for an increase in the salary of superior court judges.

John M. Parker, international representative of the railwaymen, was in the city today. He could not state definitely whether the men would strike or nitely whether the men would strike or not, but declared that they had done all they were going to do to avert trouble. Any further move would have to come from the commission.

Commissioner W. A. Martin stated to The Advertiser that the railway commission would move to avert trouble.

"The commission is quite willing to co-operate with the men in obtaining a board of arbitration," he said. "The men have appointed a representative and we have a man in view whom we intend to have a man in view whom we intend to have a man in view whom we intend to ask to represent us. He is not a Londoner, and has a reputation of having handled several matters of this kind to the satisfaction of all concerned. If this man will accept the appointment the two representatives can then get together and appoint a third member of the board or if they cannot agree on one, then the Dominion Government will be asked to make an appointment.

Try It Out.

"I do not think there will be a strike until this method has been tried. Any decision given will be retroactive, so that there will be nothing lost by awaiting the outcome of the board."

Commissioner Martin dialmed that the commission was badly handicapped by the adverse vote last sanuary, when further expenditures for equipment were refused. Because of this, the road was already refusing business, as it could not handle it, and if the wages asked by not handle it, and if the wages asked by the men were granted, would finish with a deficit instead of a surplus.
