Washington, Aug. 16.—Secretary McAdoo said on his return to duty in the treasury department and the office of the director-general of railroads, that his observation of the vast resources of water power during the two months he had been absent from Washington since the close of the last bond campaign, had impressed him with the idea of electrifying the railroads of the United States. If the government were to continue the administration of the railroads of the country for any prolonged period, he said, he would be in favor of resorting to the use of electricity just as far as it could be practically employed. Notwithstanding the great development throughout the country of water power properties there remained, Mr. McAdoo said, a tremendous empire of power yet to be harnessed and turned to account in moving the industries and the transportation of the American people. This power, now almost entirely the property of the United States, could be commandeered with a cost slight in comparison with the advantages to be derived from it. This, in view of the continually troublesome problems connected with the supply and distribution of the coal necessary in manufactures and to heat homes and city apartments, was a consummation that sooner or later would be forced on the country by absolute necessity. duced steam, but it might come as a plain matter of necessity while this war was on.
