

POETRY.

THE DYING SOLDIER.

BY E. H. NASH.

After Montcalm was wounded he dictated a letter recommending the French prisoners to the kindness of their captors.

Anew his life-blood is flowing;
Speak lower—low,
He moans: his spirit is going
From all below.

No, no, he is not yet dying—
He moves again;
Ah! hear, with his latest sighing,
In mighty pain.

His lips they moved for others,
He speaks the word
For the captive brave, his brothers,
Though low 'tis heard.

'Tis heard, and now he is dying,
A single moan,
And those who around are sighing

Tame Codfish.

Mr. Buckland in a recent number of Land and Water, gives an interesting account of a visit paid by him to a pond containing tame codfish at Port Logan, Wiltshire. The property in question belongs to a gentleman by the name of McDougall and consists of an amphitheatre about one hundred feet in diameter hollowed out of the solid rock by the sea. All access from this is prevented by a barrier of loose stones, through which water passes freely. On approaching the shore of the pond many codfish of great size were seen; and when a servant woman who had charge of the fish approached, with some mussels, the surface of the water was perfectly alive with struggling fish. They came close to the edge, and after a little while permitted Mr. Buckland to scratch them on the back, and play with them in various ways. Among other experiments tried by him was that of holding a mussel in his hand, and allowing the fish to swallow his hand in the effort to obtain the mussel. These fish furnish to the proprietor an ample supply of excellent food, the flavor being considered much superior to that of cod taken in the open sea. Whenever needed for the table, a selection can readily be made from the most promising of those at hand, and the fish secured without any difficulty.

An Eastern newspaper statistician avers that the flies are so good natured this season that a well-organized one will allow himself to be brushed off one's nose eighty-seven times, and not show any temper.

A preacher one slippery, frosty morning, going home with one of his elderly members, the old gentleman slipped and fell. When the minister saw that he was not hurt, he said, "My friend, sinners stand on slippery places." "Yes," replied the old man, looking at the preacher, "I see they do, but I can't."

To dispel darkness from about you make little of your troubles.
