ANGLING NOTES.

Mr. Reginald Northcote, the big hop dealer of this city, is an enthusiastic sportsman, and whether with rod or gun, he is an excellent performer. Like many other genuine sportsmen he is fond of taking his wife along with him on his angling trips, and I happen to know that on several occasions she substantially proved herself the better half by catching the most fish, and the biggest ones too. There is one thing that Mr. Northcote always takes along on his numerous excursions. He would as soon go fishing without bait, or hunting without ammunition as to go without a stock of "Bovril." He pronounces it the most invigorating pick-me-up that ever a man hooked to when he starts out for an early start, and at night after a long day's sport, he has always found it a wonderful invigorator.

CONFIDENTIAL BEAUTY

"My dear Mrs. Angel, let me congratulate you your beautiful and clear complexion, causing you have so youthful an appearance. I mention this briefly because those two gentlemen friends of yours that I passed up the avenue remarked as they me. 'By Jove! isn't Mrs. A.—typical! Such beauty skin—her complexion is perfect, and she doesn't look thirty'; and more, but I could not hear what it was.
This is pleasing to our sex, as you know; now give my reward by telling me why and how it is—what a secret, my dear friend! We are the same age, forty-so you can easily understand why I am so interested know the secret of your youthful loveliness."

"You are the dear, good friend of my life. Owe ladies do like admiration, especially from those love, may be from the opposite sex, so for this pleasure I will give you my secret. For seven years I have used Dr. T. G. Goussard's Oriental Cream, the greatest Purifier and Beautifier of the skin in world, the great preventative of those blemishes cause premature appearance of age. It is my trust, Angel, and here is Sherry."
