PROMPTING AN AUDIENCE.

English Astere Give a Signal Whon It's Time to Laugh.

"Nothing illustrates the difference between English and American wit more, probably, than the manner in which playwrights write their lines," said Rupert Hughes. "There are few, manner the weither the interiors of the people who realize the intricacy of the science of writing a 'laugh'—that is, a line capable of producing a laugh from

"A man may write one of the funniest lines ever given to the American stage and see it ignored by an audi-ence because of some act on the part of the producing company or one mem-ber of that company. I have seen the wittiest remarks wasted because of the move of a hand or of the head of the comedian or actor who enun it. Then, again, the laugh is taken out of a line by the moving of some person in the stage setting or by the moving of some part of the stage set-ting itself. It is funny how the slightest move on the part of an actor, after reciting certain lines, absolutely eliminates the wit from what he has just spoken, so far as the audience is con-

but not so of the English theater going public. They will not laugh unless the witticism is finished by a nod of the head or a certain movement of the

"It is on this account that certain comedies, great successes in this country, are absolute failures in Great Britain," he continues. "Something must be done when a 'laugh line' is spoken on the English stage to give the audience an inkling that the witticism has been completed. Then you get your laugh.

"Not so, on the contrary, with Americans. I remember of hearing of an incident involving one of Olga Nethersole's first appearances in this country. Several times during the performance the celebrated actress walked to the sides and exclaimed to the stage manager: 'What's the matter? Are they going to hiss me off? Why, they applaud before they hear the end of the lines.' In each instance she was told that the audience was quicker been accustomed to playing. She was told the Americans grasped the meaning and the wit of her lines when she had spoken only half of them. The actress, although she received all kinds of applause during the performance, seemed disheartened." — Washington

A Wig and a Tragedy.

It is just as well that our enthusiasm for oriental curiosities should be tempered by discretion. Eastern antiquities may be picturesque and with all the charm of mystery, but at the same time they may have a history that, if known, would consign them to the stove without benefit of clergy. Here is a story bearing upon the point and with its obvious moral. A young and extremely pretty girl went to a fancy dress ball in Chinese costume. The triumph of her makeup was a real oriental wig, and she wore it proudly. Some time after a strange mark appeared on her forehead, and this was treated as a trifling skin affection. But it refused to disappear; in fact, it grew larger, and then the specialist was consulted. It was leprosy.—Argonaut.

Color of Lightning.

The color of lightning is almost entirely due to the nature of the substance in its track that is made incandescent. The blue, red, purple or silver tints, which are ordinarily much more brilliantly marked in tropical countries than they ever are in this latitude, are due to the same circumstance as that which produces the color designedly communicated to the light of different kinds of fireworks. #### NAPOLEON'S TAILOR

Man Who Dared to Disabey His Imperial Master.

The diary of Poumies de la Mineutie (horn 1780, died in 1868), recently translated into English, has something about Napoleon, that remarkable main who continues to be the most interesting figure in European history. Here is one about Napoleon's carelessness in dress and what came of it:

In 1810, when Napoleon went to Complegne to receive Marie Louise, his sister, the Princess Borghese said to

"Your clothes are badly cut and do not wearing braces—your trousers al-ways look as if they were falling off"— "Well," answered the emperor, "what do you advise me to do about it? Can you recommend another

"Have a talk with Constant." Constant, the emperor's valet, was sent for and named one Leger, who was tailor to Murat, Prince Eugene, Joseph and Jerome Bonaparte. A mes-senger was sent to summon him, and he arrived at Complegne the next day. From that moment he made everything Napoleon wore. He consistently ignored his imperial patron's sugges tions concerning his clothes. For instance, the emperor wished the skirts of his tunics to be turned back, like those of Frederick the Great. should not think of allowing such a thing, sire! You would look absurd, and my reputation would be lost. The eyes of the whole world are upon your majesty, and if you were seen wearing such a uniform as you propose it would be a disadvantage to you, and I should have to bear the blame. I would not make you such a tunic if you offered me the whole of your em-

ESKIMO SEALERS.

A Battle of Alertness Between Hunter and His Prev.

The Eskimo method of hunting seals shows a primitive calling improved to the direction of the wind is at once noted. Then the hunter, keeping himself to the leeward of the seal, walks up to within about a quarter of a mile of it. Beyond this he begins to crouch and advances only when the seal's head is down.

Now, as the seal is one of the most wideawake of animals and has the habit of throwing up its head quickly danger, it follows that the Eskimo has to be extremely alert if he would get his seal. When the seal's head is down upon the ice its eyes are shut, and it is said that in these brief intervals it takes its sleep.

The hunter by carefully watching the seal's movements is able without much difficulty to get within about 200 yards of it, but at closer quarters he is obliged to employ other tactics. He lies down at full length on the ice.

Then the real sport begins.

When the seal's head is down the hunter, who keeps a keen eye on his prey, is able to approach still nearer by dragging himself forward on his elbows. This maneuvering continues for some time until the distance between man and beast has been reduced to a few yards.

When near enough to make a sure shot the Eskimo takes his bow and arrow from his side and sends a swift shaft through the head of his outwition. Sometimes instead of the bow and arrow a harpoon is used with equal effect.-Harper's Weekly.
