Miscellaneous.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by purifying and enriching the blood, improves the appetite, aids the assimilative process, stengthens the nerves, and invigorates the system. It is, therefore, the best and most thoroughly reliable alterative that can be found for old and young.

"What are we coming to?" yelled an impassioned orator, whose audience had been gradually dribbling away for half an hour.

"A full stop," replied the janitor calmly, as he turned off the gas.

Ayer's Hair Vigor restores color and vitality to weak and gray hair. Through its healing and cleansing qualities, it prevents the accumulation of dandruff and cures all scalp diseases. The best hair-dressing ever made, and by far the most economical.

"Paps," said Amy, hesitatingly, "I—I must confess something. Harry and I had arranged to elope to-night, but my conscience troubles me, and I just had to tell you, and spoiled it all."

"It need not spoil it," replied the fond parent; "go ahead and elope, but never tell I knew it. It will save the expenses of a wedding."

DANIEL KIERSTEAD.

Canaan Forks, N. B.

John Mader, Mahone Bay, informs us that he was cured of a very severe attack of rheumatism by using MINARD'S LINIMENT.

It is related that, at the battle of Malvern Hill, Governor Vance, charging up the declivity, with the shot rattling about him and bombshells bursting in every direction, met an old hare, with ears back, running for dear life. "Go it Mollie Cottontail," exclaimed the governor "if I hadn't a reputation to sustain, I'd be with you."

Mothers

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegetable preparation, its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mothers' friend. 35 doses, 35 cents.

Cadley—"The great point of a jest is that it should be spontaneous. It should be as quick as a flash, you know. Now I never think a joke over before I utter it." Bagley—No; if you did you would not say it at all, would you?" Cadley—"Certainly not."—America.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Answer This Question.

Why do so many people we see around us seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming Up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents we will sell them Shiloh's System Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Farm and Household.

NOTES ON MANURE.

Manure is the leading topic of inquiry among all classes of farmers and gardeners. The values of certain substances, in fact of almost every substance, are still mooted points. We are only beginning to learn in this direction. But some thing is accomplished when we know what we are talking about. "Manure is plantfood" is a poor definition; "manure is a promoter of plant-growth, employing potash merely as so much potash, and nitrogen as so much nitrogen; the other admits of the mechanical improvement of soil and food for the plant at the same time. Our knowledge of the use and treatment of stable manure is yet imperfect. But we no longer hold to the notion that manure applied in the fall leaches away and is lost, or that its essential elements vaporize. On the contrary, we know that the best results come from application in the fall, and the more vegetable matter the soil contains the more complete will be the retention of the soluble ingredients. In barnyards the soluble materials may pass into the underlying soils or be carried down gutters, but in compost piles which are four or five feet high, or even less, it is doubtful if the rain-fall of any season is sufficient to wash away the elements of fertility. But we do not recommend composting manure; there is no necessity for such an operation. But the refuse of the garden, the vines of squashes, potatoes, tomatoes, the trimmings of cabbage, celery and vegetable refuse, become valuable when composted. Of commercial substances, no doubt wood-ashes, finely-ground bone and nitrate of soda are the best for the gardener. But ashes are often of doubtful utility, and should be purchased cautiously.

SMALL THINGS.

To be successful a farmer must have an income. It is not enough to produce what is wanted for consumption in the family, though this is a help as far as it goes. There is above this however, a call for money that must be headed. To meet this call the plan should be to have something to sell at all times of the year. Poultry, eggs, beef, veal, fruit, vegetables, early and late, each in its own way, though small in the single item, yet in the aggregate may be made to substantially swell the income and aid in meeting necessary expenses. Every time the farmer goes to town something is wanted, and by proper attention something can be taken to market to meet the draft. It will never do to ignore small things. It may be difficult to cipher out that these small matters pay day wages and a profit in their production, yet the farmer is better off for having them to sell. The fact is the labor and care called for in their production is supplied in snatches of time hardly missed from other duties and which otherwise might not be employed at wages. Thus it is that the farmer can make all his time count. Attention to small things, and always something to sell will contribute much to a farmer's success.—Maine Farmer.

GOOD BUTTER MAKING.

Too few realize that their way of making is not the method by which the butter is made which brings the highest price. No one is selling butter now at advanced and paying prices who still clings to "grandmother's way of making. Neither does the market put a premium on butter made from actively sour cream, nor butter with pronounced buttermilk flavor or made sharp with over salting. Butter, to bring a high price, must be made of cream not over thirty-six hours old, slightly acid. It must be washed free from buttermilk with weak brine, and salted not to exceed three-quarters of an ounce to the pound. Butter also needs to be packed in some of the cheap but tasteful packages now obtainable, and sent to the market immediately. Long keeping butter is no longer called for. Butter is made to sell, not to keep, and the consumer says, "to eat fresh, not held until devoid of fine flavor or aroma." The great evil is that so much butter is made by those who have a few cows that they cannot make a specialty of fine butter making, and so make as best suits them. This butter made from old, and often fermenting cream, is at the start destitute of butter flavor. It is not washed free from buttermilk, but "worked over" with ladle "balled up" and sent to the grocery store, unprotected from the light and air, and then consigned to the "shoe box." When at last weeks may be, though it should have only been days at the most, this butter finds its way to the city market to be rejected and neglected, it is finally sold for a few cents per pound, and actually scoffed at by the proscribed oleomargarine.

ASHES AS A FERTILIZER.

It seems strange that any one should ask if ashes are of any value as a fertilizer; yet such an inquiry comes from a reader who asks if leached or unleached ashes are good or bad as top-dressing for grass land or lawns. There are few soils that are not improved by moderate applications of either leached or unleached ashes. In some sections they show such good results as to lead some to look upon them as a complete manure. Wherever the soil is deficient in potash, ashes are valuable. They also have a value in their contents of phosphoric acid and some other elements. Unleached ashes contain a much greater proportion of potash than leached, but the latter may not have lost their phosphoric acid to any appreciable degree. As ashes do not waste by exposure to the air, they may be used as top-dressing on mowings, pastures or lawns without waste. I have known lawns to be so heavily covered with unleached ashes as to destroy the sod; some men still act on the principle that if a little is good, more must be better. Spread ashes at the rate of from twenty five to fifty bushels per acre, or more if leached, and no harm will result. But since the discovery of the potash mines in Germany, potash can be bought in the form of potash salts much cheaper than it has often cost in wood ashes.

HOW TO TELL GOOD OATS.

Good oats are clean, hard, dry, sweet, heavy, plump, full of flour, and rattle like shot. They have a clean and almost metallic lustre. Each oat in a well grown sample is nearly of the same size. There are but few small or imperfect grains. The hard pressure of the nail on an oat should leave little or no mark. The kernel when pressed between the teeth should clip rather than tear. The skin should be thin. The size of the kernel will be less in proportion than the skin is thick. The color of the oats is not very material but white oats are generally thinner in the skin than black. Again, black oats will grow on inferior soils. Short, plump oats are preferable to large, long grains. Bearded oats must have an excess of husk. Oats are not necessarily bad because they are thin skinned or bearded; but they must contain a less amount of flour per bushel than thin skinned oats without beard.

REGULARITY OF HABIT.

One of the most difficult of all the minor habits is to acquire that of regularity. It ranks with that of order. The natural inclination of most persons is to defer until the last possible moment, or to put off to another time, where this can possibly be done. Yet, habits of regularity contribute to the ease and comforts of life. A person can multiply his efficency by it. We know persons who have a multitude of duties, and perform a vast deal of work daily, who set apart certain hours for giving duties, and are there at the moment, and attend rigidly to what is in hand. This done, and other engagements are met, each in order, and a vast deal accomplished; not by strained exertion, but by regularity. The mind can be so trained to this that at certain hours of the day it will turn to a particular line of duty; and at other hours to other and different labors. The very diversity is restful, when attended to in regular order. But let these be run together, and the duties mixed, and what was before easy is now annoying and oppressive. And the exact difference between many is just at this point. There are those who confuse and rush, and attempt to do several things at once and accomplish little, while another will quietly proceed from one duty to another, and easily accomplish a vast amount of work. The difference is not in the capacity of the two, but in the regular methods of the one as compared with the irregular and confused habits of the other.

MANURING ORCHARDS.

There is no part of the farm that gives better returns for the manure expenditure than the orchard. Thorough work must be done in this matter for best results. Do not pile a little around the body of the tree and think you have done your duty, give the whole surface a good coat and if you can't secure a supply of ashes at even ten or twelve cents per bushel, put them on, too. Sixty to eighty bushels to the acre is a fair dressing, but half as much more will not be too much. No good farmer will starve his animals and expect them to give him good returns; but very many otherwise good farmers starve their fruit trees, and, because they do not yield heavy crops, say "The Orchard Don't Pay."

Speaking of lime wash for poultry houses, O. S. Bliss says: "In a few hours the wash becomes dried and as harmless as sand, every destructive agent in it being effectually locked up. But the habitable retreats of the insects have been increased in number a hundred or a thousand fold. Cracks and other places without number which before were uninhabitable by them have had the dust wiped out, or wet down, and a protecting scale of whitewash hung up before them, thus creating many a new nidus where none existed before. If a house is really infested and it becomes desirable to clean it out to get rid of the vermin, it is easier, cheaper and far more effective to apply strong soapsuds with or without the addition of kerosene, spirits of turpentine, or any other of the agents employed to render it more effective. Such a wash not only kills the vermin, but detaches the accretions which protect them and leaves a free open space, which is greatly preferable to one partly filled with anything, except it be fine, dry dust in which insects cannot live. If the cracks and other spaces in a poultry house are to be filled at all it should be with mortar containing sufficient plaster of paris, raw or calcined, or other similar substance to make the filling solid. But I repeat what I have often said, that there is no occasion for any of these things when the supply of dust is what it should be in every case."

Cleanliness is one of the essential features of the dairy room and of the handling of milk in general. If you are careless in this matter, no matter how careful you are in other details, you will have a prime article. A half a minute spent in brushing off the cow's udder before milking will often save exiling the butter merchant hurd names after the return for the butter has come. There is a certain aroma that customers are willing to pay for—but it doesn't come from the cow stable.
