OTTAWA, June 8 .- After prayers, Speaker White announced that he had taken the liberty of ordering the symbols of mourning for the chamber of the house that had lost its leader. He hoped the house would concur in what he had done. Sir Hector Langevin, on rising to move that the honor of a public funeral be given to the premier, said that under fallen to his lot to announce that his old chief and comrade was no more. After an illness of two weeks death had put an end to his career. To tell you my feelings under this bereavement-here Sir Hector broke down and for some time nounced by physicians incurable, and was unable to proceed. The future Montreal "Family Herald and Weekly historian might not agree that Sir John Macdenald's policy was always right, but he would say that he was Canada's greatest man and would tell how, after fifty years' labor, he died in the midst of his official duties, not having had a day's rest until he was on his death bed. He (Sir Hector) had spent half his lifetime by the side of his late chief and would like to speak of him in his personal relations. He was proceeding to do so when he broke down altogether and was forced to ciated the deep grief of the premier's friend and colleague. The emotion that choked his utterance was more eloquent than any words could be. "We," he said, "who did not believe in his policy or always approved of his methods, feel that the loss was more than a personal calamity. It was a national loss, for the un who was dead was Canada's foremost statesman". Mr. Laurier spoke of the premier's unceasing activity and told how that some months ago everybody but the premier's own buoyant self was afraid that the angel of death was near. Later, there came a night when the house in the midst of an angry discussion had learned that the angel of death was indeed at hand, and the voice of strife was June 9-schr Eagle, 29, McLaughlan, Tra instant'y hushed into calm. And yet it was almost impossible to convince the unwilling mind that in the chair now empty he who had been in this house for forty years would sit no more, that the voice so often heard here was stilled for ever. It was almost impossible to think of this country going on its way without him. It seemed that one of the institutions of the land had broken down Speaking of the verdict of history, Mr. June 10-schr Eagle, 29, McLaughlan, Tra- Lurier said that already it was agreed that in the art of governing men Sir John Macdouald was gifted as few men have ever been. He would have shone on any theatre of affairs; the more, the larger the theatre. His power to unite conflicting elements in the nation was almost unprecedented. He maintained the confidence and ardent devotion of all the elements of his party. The record of his life is the history of a country which had grown from a few scattered provinces with no common interest, into the country as it is now We, said Mr. Laurier, did not agree hine Satellite, 273, Kearon, Galtaes, Nfld., bal. with him in his last campaign.
