Long Argument Heard By the Judge This Morning.

Comment On Introduction Black Hand Methods.

udge Declares Corto Not to Be An Accomplice.

Argumen's of counsel and the addresses if His Honor, Judge Snider, in the Tagerino case, occupied the time of the county Court this morning.

Mr. McBrady, counsel for the defence,

Mr. McBrady, counsel for the defence, it his address to the jury explained the inany discrepancies in the evidence gainst his client. His Honor's address it as concise and to the point. Mr. McBrady said his client was not sharged with conspiracy, but with the triting of the letters which were sent to inazone. There were two charges. It tould be necessary for them to ascertain that Taglerino had the letters writh by others and forwarded by his en by others and forwarded by his command, knowing the contents. Admit-edly four men went to the Dundas road sdly four men went to the Dundas road o hold up Sanzone, but Taglerino was tot there, although Corto was. Corto was the fourth man, and stopped Sansone, but the police arrested only three md allowed the fourth to run like a deer. Forto went to Taglerino's house and, according to Mrs. Taglerino's statements, fifled a trunk, taking $100, for which she tad him arrested. Two days after he lad him arrested. Two days after he poke up and blamed Taglerino for writ-ng the threatening letters. When Spersingly columns and Wolfe were before undge Snider charged with the crime, they swore Corto was the main one in tomcocting the scheme. The convicts and sworn the same in their evidence testerday. At their trial they denied that Taglerino had anything to do with the outrage. The question was rather the outrage. The question was rather who was the man capable of concocting plan, Corto or Taglerino. Taglerino lad his business to attend to, but Corto his evidence said he worked when he

"I think I do; this is an official re-rd produced and I was just reading wo questions."

"Very well, then, but I rule against cour reading evidence."
Mr. MeBrady drew atention to the act that Miss Bartlett, Rufus' house-teeper, had been wheeled into the lime-teeper, had been wheeled for the girlt yesterday to granight yesterday to help crown was not convict a prisoner who was not guilty, but merely to help compare those guilty. As a means of doing so he intended to go over the evidence shortly. The second letter could not have been written by Speranzo, Colombo or Wolfe, as they were in jail at that time. As far as the discrepancies in the evidence were concerned, such things were likely to occur at any time. Unless it could be shown that the main story or the main incidents in the story had differed, the story should be believed. Rufus' statements were partly cornal difference where the story should be believed. Rufus' statements were partly cornal difference where the story should be believed. They do not know this story has leaked out, but if the law of as you sow so you shall reap works out in their case, may be don't have a rich harveat.

differed. Rose Bartlett and Rufus had no reason to give evidence against him unless it was because he ordered them out of his house because they were smoking eigarettes.

His Honor explained that the charge against the prisoner was for uttering or causing to be received by any person a letter demanding money. The person who wrote the letter was clearly an offender, or if a person caused the letter to be written he was guilty. The letter had to contain threats and a request for money, without any reasonable right to do so. There was no doubt that someone was guilty of sending them to Sanzone. Each one connected with the letmoney, without any reasonable right to do so. There was no doubt that someone was guilty of sending them to Sanzone. Each one connected with the letter writing was liable. With the latter writing was liable. With the advent of the Italians black hand methods had been introduced. As far as Corto was concerned, he went to the police when the story was first hatching, and told them of the whole scheme to secure the mone, from his friend. The detectives had informed him it would be necessary for him to keep in with the story. them of the whole scheme to secure the money from his friend. The detectives had informed him it would be necessary for him to keep in with the plotters. They should relieve their minds of the statement that had been credited to him that Corto was an accomplice. He had not been, because he was aware that Corto acted for the police. The first letter was written by somebody, and posted, according to Corto, at Niagara Falls by him, but it was necessary for them to discover whether his statements were correct. If Taglerino was believed,

As soon as the jury retired, 317, 362-Brady asked for a reserve case on the grounds that there was no evidence of the posting of the letter if Rufus' evi-dence was reliable or that there had been any connection between Taglerino and Sanzone. According to law his client could not be found guilty of the charge of uttering the letter, as, because he of uttering the letter, as, because he could not read or write, it had not been proven that he knew the contents of the letter.

His Honor refused to grant his re-

Basketball.

The basketball committee of the Y. M. C. A. met last night and selected the following men to represent the association on Christmas night against London: T. Ross, W. McPherson, R. Branston, A. Wilson, G. McNeilly, C. Peace and D. Findlay. T. Ross will captain the team, and a special practice will be held Thursday. Every man on the team has been playing the game for years. Ross and McPherson won honors with the intermediate champions. Every man is a good shot, check and good catch. With attention to team work they will certainly give a good account of them.

with attention to team work they will certainly give a good account of them-selves this season. At the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium two more fast games of basketball were played in the Commercial League last night night.

The first game, between the Wood Milling and the T., H. & B., was certainly fast. The T., H. & B. has strengthened up a lot, and had Wood Milling beaten until three-quarter time, when the latter, with splendid combination, ran the score up at the finish to 23-12.

The second game was also a *fast one and, although the score, 39—19, would indicate that Mills Hardware Co, had a walk-over, such was not the case. Mills Hardware played their best game, and put up one of the fastest games of the series. Every man scored from three to five baskets. Their combination work was excellent, and could not be better.

The final games next Tuesday night, when Oak Hall meet T. H. & B., and Wood Milling meet Mills Hardware Co., will be worth seeing.

A Christmas Incident That Shows Genuine Charity.

Let him that is pessimistic about the genuineness of Christmas give car to this true story. It would also be good for true story. It would also be good for his evidence said he worked when he iked. The flimsiness of Corto's evidence true story, it would also be good for his who thinks that there are no kind hearts not given until he tried to drive the thole thing home to Taglerino.

Mr. McBrady then read some evidence it the Police Court given by Corto, but fils Honor ruled against it on the ground hat he could not read evidence that had to been put in.

"Very well. His Honor won't permit me to read the evidence," remarked Mr. McBrady, eveen though it is an official record produced."

"No. now, Mr. McBrady, you know the rules as well as I do," said his Honor.

"I think I do; this is an official record produced and I was just reading treading the produced and I was just reading true true story. It would also be good for him who thinks that there are no kind hearts in the world to-day. It's a sure thing that there are two hearts at least in this city that the dross of selfishness has not touched. No names will be used in the story, but they can be furnished if desired; they are known to the Times office.

On a certain street in the southwest section of this city lives a man and woman, with five children. The man, owing to sickness, is unable to work very much, so the wife and mother, in the endeavor to make ends meet, goes out washing and does other tasks in the world to-day. It's a sure thing that there are two hearts at least in this city that the dross of selfishness has not touched. Among the places that the woman has called every week to help in the work on wash day was the home of the two girls in question. Those girls learned of the struggle the woman was facing. They learned that the five kiddies sometimes have insufficient food, and that the clothing the youngsters wear are not warm enough to keep the cold out. The girls also learned that the woman has a delicate daughter, who is in the hospital.

Grand Lodge Officers Visited the Local Lodges.

Canadian Oddfellows of the four Ham ilton lodges had a fine time last evening when the District Deputy Grand Master, Falls by him, but it was necessary for them to discover whether his statements were correct. If Taglerino was believed, then he had nothing to do with it. The difference of evidence should be given proper weight, but he left it at what had been said pro and con. The story of Ross Bartlett as to the row and later the writing should be carefully considered. Taglerino had been in Toronto, but not on the date referred to by Corto. The second letter could not have been written by the three convicts, as they were under arrest at that time. They should find the prisoner not guilty if the evidence of the three Crown witnesses was not relied on, or if there existed a doubt in their minds he should get the benefit.

Mr. McBrady said his Honor had not drawn the jury's attention to the fact that the prisoner would need to have direct knowledge of the contents of the letter, and his Honor instructed the jury on that point.

Mr. McBrady raised objection to the denial of his Honor of his statement that he had said Corto was an accomplice, as he had done so in his charge to the jury in the former case. His Honor explained he had referred to it as a mistake.

ing which was placed before it yesterday.

The report that W. J. Kinsley, the handwriting expert, had found that the "suicide" notes, alleged to have, been written by Occy S. Snead, were all genuine, gave the case another strange turn to-day. Prosecutor Mott, however, has declared that even should this finding be rendered by the expert he employed, he still would press the charges before the grand jury. These notes, once thought to be so important, were declared by the prosecutor to be overshadowed by other discoveries he had a made in connection with the alleged plot to bring about the death of the young woman.

STRANGE CASE OF RICH YOUNG MAN.

the paper in the City Hall police office shortly before 5 o'clock that entitled him to be released. From there he went home, at a hearty supper, and went out, and presumably shot himself soon after. While walking his beat about 7.25 p. T. P. C. Goodman saw a man leaning against the fence at the corner of Sherman and Delaware avenues.

The officer asked the youth what he was doing there, but on getting closer to him, the constable saw blood streaming down his face. He was at once taken near a street light on Main street, where it was perceived that Mitchell had shot himself, for in his hand he held a five-chambered English buildog revolver. Two barrels were empty, and Mitchell said he had emptied them on himself. Fortunately a car was passing and P. C. Goodman stopped it, jumped on, taking Mitchell with him, and hastened to No. 3 Police Station with his man.

Arriving there, Officers Cameron and Barrett were making preparations for getting the confiscated goods identified, when Mitchell was brought in by Goodman. The ambulance was at once called and the injured man rushed to the City Hospital, while messengers were despatched to notify the relatives.

At the Hozpital it was found that two builets had entered the head.

Some years ago, before the youngman's father died, Magistrate Jelfs made the deceased man's will. At his death he left an estate valued at $25,000, which the Magistrate says has increased a great deal in value.

000, which the Magistrate says has inscreased a great deal in value.

Since the police received their tip about Mitchell, they, last week, found him late one night, with a cement bag that contained goods that he could not satisfactorily account for, when he was searched in the City Hall.

In the stuff found in Mitchell's were bicycles that had been utterly destroyed, evidently as soon as placed there, electric batteries; parts of old engines, and a lot of stuff that, although valuable when taken, was of no value to Mitchell. It is said he never attempted to dispose of any of the stuff or to benafit by it in any way.
