Some way in which that gerrymander was forced through the Legislature of Prince Edward Island, but as the hour is late I will forbear.
I trust that I do not feel the honorable member for Queen's, or any other unbiased gentleman, to make a fairer distribution of the Province of Prince Edward Island into five ridings, than has been done under the present Bill.

Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) I have listened carefully to the hon. members for Queen's (Mr. Davies) and Prince (Mr. Perry) to see if I could respect they had fault with the redistribution as it applies to Prince Edward Island. I find that the only fault they tried to point out to the House is the one that the county lines will be broken, and I think that the House will agree with me that if they had, as they had during the last parliament, in this county six Liberal representatives, Prince Edward Island, they would not find fault with the gerrymander, as they call it, as it is at present.
Do the hon. gentlemen from Queen's pretend to tell this House that if they were two Liberals representing King's in this House at the present time that they would be in the first place, that the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies), if he conveyed any impression at all to my mind, conveyed the impression that I do not think that the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) ever represented the House that he never lived in East Queen's and that if there is any representative for East Queen's it is his colleague (Mr. Wicks) because he actually lives in East Queen's, as we know. His summer residence is on lot 48, which is in East Queen's, but the hon. member from Charlottetown (Mr. Davies) never represented East Queen's any more than he did the whole of the county, except that the two hon. gentlemen ran as colleagues. According to the red-istribution as it is now, and taking the last election in King's County and adding the whole vote Liberal and Conservative, and dividing it in two, the result would stand that King's County gave 171 Conservative majority, and Queen's East Conservative majority of 280.
Now, I think that the hon. member for East Queen's (Mr. Davies) as he calls himself, will say that if the government have done half the wicked things he has said they have done during this last session, that it would not be hard to overcome that majority of 89 against him. But the hon. gentleman stands the fact that in the election before the last he had about 1,000 majority in Queen's whole election he had only a majority of about 400, and he is perhaps afraid that it will go on in that direction.
I do not think that he could otherwise complain that the majority of 89 is going to gerrymander him out of the county. In West Queen's there is a Liberal majority of 305, and that should be a safe constituency for the hon. gentleman if he want to get one, and is afraid of being gerrymandered. Now, it is said that this is a gerrymander being attempted in East Prince. When I tell the House that in East Prince there is a Conservative majority of only 30, it cannot be fairly asserted that an attempt has been made to gerrymander that district, while in the western part of the county, from lot 1 to lot 16, there is a Liberal majority of 616, and these liberals are not interfered with in any way.
When the Island is divided into five ridings instead of three counties as before each man running an election will have to run on his own merits, and cannot be helped by his colleague who lives at the other end of the county; and on that principle this is as fair a distribution of ridings as could be made. I would say positively, not one lot has been broken, and any gentleman who takes the map and goes into a room, not knowing the political complexion of one part or another of the Island, and attempts to divide the Island into five cir-constitencies, will arrive at the very same figures.

Mr. Davies (P. E. I.) Will the
hon. gentleman claim, because they divided the Island so as to give Conservative majorities in three districts?

Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) I will ask the hon. gentleman if there has been one lot passed over for the purpose of doing that?

Mr. Davies (P. E. I.) Yes.
Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) Does the
hon. gentleman claim, because they are four Liberal representatives in this House, that they have such a large majority that they are entitled to that for all time to come?

Mr. Davies (P. E. I.) The hon. gentleman did not hear question.
I asked him if the Island has not been divided that while it sends five Liberal members and one Conservative member to-day, there will be Conservative majorities in three of the districts out of the five?

Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) I have been so far that I have given the hon. figures in each county, and the hon. gentleman has not tried to deny them.

Mr. Davies (P. E. I.) Do they not show a majority in three districts?

Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) I have read them so; but the only trouble with the hon. gentleman is that he has pointed out that lot 24 has been voted in West Queen's in the last 20 years. I do not know that it has voted with the hon. gentleman every time he has run an election, but it has not been transferred to the centre of the county.
The hon. gentleman's idea was to put lot 24 in West Queen's. But Queen's will have a population of 26,466, and West Queen's 23,816

Lot 24 has 5,615. Take that out of West Queen's and it would be a population of 23,816. That is what the hon. gentleman would be a fair division; but he forgets to add that it would convert his majority of 89 to a majority of 120.

Mr. McLean (P. E. I.) That is just the reason I put in to convert my majority into a minority.

Mr. Davies (P. E. I.) I appeal to the House if that would be a fair division. Then we have the fact that the hon. gentleman lives in West Queen's and he is not compelled to run into East Queen's unless he sees fit. If he thinks he has more influence in the county than he has, and he thinks this is a gerrymander in the eyes of the people of Prince Edward Island, with the object of taking his seat from him, and to overcome a majority of 89. We know that in Prince Edward Island the great question before the people has been the question of free trade, and upon that question the hon. gentleman carried his election by a large majority; but he forgets to tell this House that that majority has been greatly reduced, and it is not compelled to run into East Queen's
people of Prince Edward Island,

Edward Island the great question
people of Prince Edward Island,
