H.P. is on the dining tables of all the principal hotels and restaurants in this district—but not in this district alone, it is enjoyed all over the world

No well regulated home is complete without it—it's useful in so many ways

Notes From Harbor Grace.

Rev. T. B. Darby, of the Methodist Church, and Rev. F. S. Coffin, of the Kirk, exchanged pulpits yesterday at the forenoon service.

The Sacrament of Baptism was administered at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at the regular service last night when little Miss Archibald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Archibald, was given the very pretty name of Florence Gertrude; Rev. Mr. Coffin officiated.

A large number of citizens took advantage of the excursion rates to visit St. John's, and left by this morning's train. They will thus be enabled to visit the exhibition, and see friends during the week. The week-end excursion of the summer was much appreciated by the public, and many people would be pleased if the arrangement was permanent, so that all seasons of the year friends could visit friends on Saturday, returning on Monday at a reduced rate, many would then go who could not pay the full fare.

Mr. H. Thompson, of the A. A. T. Co.'s staff, Heart's Content, spent yesterday with his parents here, returning to duty early this morning. He likes his work very much.

The service in the Kirk last night took the form of a Memorial Service, and fitting reference was made, in hymns, prayer and sermon to the awful disaster of a week ago when the S. S. Regulus went down with her crew of brave fellows. The choir, Thompson, organist, and the leader, Miss Wallace, had some suitable singing prepared, which was rendered in a very nice style. Rev. Mr. Coffin touchingly referred to the terrible disaster and invoked the Supreme blessing and comfort on the bereaved families. A large congregation was present, and the service was very affecting.

Constable Dwyer who had been on duty at St. Anthony all the summer, arrived at St. John's by the S. S. Prospero on Saturday. He is expected home to-day.

Good work and attention to orders are being given with the Harbor Grace Boot and Shoe Co., and the hands are kept busy working until 10 o'clock each night to keep up with the orders. Mr. James, the manager, is pushing his business to the fore. Some of the excellent work of this firm may be seen at the General Exhibition at St. John's this week. Mr. James and his foreman are now in St. John's arranging their exhibits.

Consumption has claimed another victim here in the person of Master John Joy, youngest son of the late Capt. Thomas and Bridget Joy, in his 16th year. John worked for the past year or so with the Archibald Brothers, who were very considerate to him and gave him all the outdoor life possible, but the dread disease had made such inroads on his health that a few weeks ago he was compelled to give up work, and gradually weakened until the end came at 10 p.m. on Friday. He leaves two brothers and one sister to mourn his early death. The funeral took place yesterday and was attended by the ladies of the C. C. C., of which he was a member. The coffin was covered by wreaths from his late employers, his fellow workmen, the young ladies of the factory, the C. C. C., Crescent Football Club, and several other friends. A beautiful wreath and glass globe was presented by the Archibald Brothers as a token of respect for one who had always accomplished the work assigned to him with diligence.

Although so young
His life's work done;
He sleeps in Christ,
The battle won.

SHE USED ONLY THE NATURAL CURE

HOW A NOVA SCOTIA WOMAN WAS RELIEVED OF HER HEART DISEASE.

Made her Kidneys right with Dodd's Kidney Pills and all her troubles vanished speedily and completely.

Bel Creek, Cumberland Co., N. S., October 31. Suffering from Female Kidney and Heart Trouble, so run down, nervous and depressed that all the brightness had gone out of her life, and never expecting to be a healthy woman again, Mrs. J. W. Leadbetter of this place tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and is once more in the best of health. Her simple statement is the best evidence that no case of Kidney Disease is so bad that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure it.

"I was treated by five doctors," Mrs. Leadbetter states. "Four of them did me no good. The fifth operated on me and that gave me relief for a time. I had Female Kidney and Heart trouble. I was so nervous and run down that my friends did not think I would ever get better. An advertisement led me to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and I found in them a cure for all my troubles. I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly."

Female Trouble and Heart Disease are caused by Kidney Disease. The natural way to cure them is to cure the Kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Nothing Great Was Ever Achieved Without Enthusiasm

We see this truism exemplified constantly in the every-day life of the "working world."

A good illustration of the above axiom was shown us on Saturday evening last at the premises of the Hon. George Knowling when an installation of High-Pressure Gas Lighting was used for the first time.

The employees of the St. John's Gas Light Company have been working on this installation for some time past, and the successful conclusion of the job on Saturday showed the public what up-to-date gas lighting could accomplish.

The St. John's Gas Light Company, following out their policy of being up-to-date, and give St. John's the best possible gas service, during the past summer sent their Managing Director, Mr. W. H. Rennie, to the Old Country to inquire into the latest developments in gas lighting, and the best way to apply same for the betterment of the Company's service in St. John's.

The result has been the adoption of the "Keith System" of High-Pressure Gas Lighting, and the brilliant exhibition of this system of lighting at the premises of the Hon. George Knowling on Saturday last, as above stated.

The outside lighting is especially brilliant, and consists of eight one thousand power candle lamps, one suspended over each window, and five hundred candle power lamps, one in each doorway. The exceeding brilliancy of these outside lamps renders unnecessary the placing of any lamps in the windows, and makes an ideal method of shop window lighting. The quality of the lighting is excellent, brilliant, steady and well diffused, and shows up the goods as clearly as daylight, and makes the matching of colors an easy matter.

Briefly, the Keith System is as follows:—

A compressor of suitable size is installed in a convenient position on the user's premises, operated in the present case by a 2½ h.p. gas engine. Any power may be used, either existing power, gas engine, or electric motor. Very little power is required, the gas is compressed and supplied to specially constructed burners at a pressure of six inches, or about thirty times the pressure used in ordinary gas lighting, and the efficiency of the gas lamps is largely increased—absolute steadiness of the lights secured. The efficiency of the lamps is sixty candle power per foot of gas used per hour, and to show the advance made by this system of gas lighting, it is only necessary to mention that the old flat flame gas burner, in common use a few years ago, had only an efficiency of about three candle power per foot of gas per hour. The efficiency of gas lighting is thus increased twenty times during the past few years.

During his visit to England Mr. Rennie saw many good examples of high-pressure gas lighting, and from his experience thus gained planned the installation now in use at the premises of the Hon. George Knowling, assisted by Mr. W. J. Edgar, the Gas Co's. Showroom Superintendent and Assistant Secretary. The result is quite up to expectations, and is as good an example of shop lighting as may be seen anywhere.

The Keith System was adopted because of the excellent results obtained with it in many of London's shops and principal streets. The Strand, King's Way, Fleet Street, No. 4 Bridge, etc., have been lighted with Keith lamps for some time past, and before the end of the year these lamps will also be in use for the lighting of Regent Street, Piccadilly, St. James' Street, Pall Mall, Piccadilly Circus, Whitehall, Victoria St. and Parliament Square. The lamps will be of a capacity of from 1,500 to 3,000 candle power.

The work of installing the plant at Knowling's was carried out by the Gas Co's. fitters under the supervision of Mr. W. D. Ryan and Mr. E. A. Ellis. The latter erected the gas engine and the compressor, and the former attended to the piping and the lamps, etc. Their assistants were Mr. Matthew Aylward and Mr. James Thompson, and the result of their work speaks well for local men, locally trained.

We congratulate both the Hon. George Knowling and the St. John's Gas Light Company on the successful completion of an installation that is a credit to both, and adds materially to the attractions of our principal business street.

A curious fashion this season is that of veiling the furs used for trimming gowns. Chiffon is the favorite material for this purpose.

The Oddities of Royal Etiquette.

Good Manners at King George's Court.

When our late King, Edward VII., came to the Throne he relaxed many of the stringencies of etiquette which hedged in Queen Victoria's position. He, however, was exceedingly particular about matters of dress, and on more than one occasion he had to rebuke a guest for visiting him without obeying the Court laws concerning attire.

For instance, before the King ascended the Throne it used to be strict etiquette that none but the regulation white tie should be worn by any guest invited to meet Royalty at dinner. At a bachelor dinner given by King Edward, when he was Prince of Wales, one of the guests turned up in a black silk tie instead of the regulation white one, and received a well-merited snub. A waiter strolled up to him and held out a silver salver, on which was a white tie. "Sir," said the servant, with his accustomed civility, "His Royal Highness has ordered me to bring you this."

Wearing Princes of Wales's Feathers.

Since that occasion gentlemen who are asked to dine with Royalty must wear a black tie with a dinner jacket, and a white tie with the ordinary evening tail coat.

When foreign Royalties are visiting a Royal palace it is the custom for the gentlemen of the Court to appear in what is known as "frock dress" and wearing all their orders. At State banquets uniforms must be worn. When the King and Queen visit together gentlemen must wear knee breeches, but when His Majesty is alone ordinary evening dress is the rule. While the Court is in mourning every guest is expected to assume the same degree of mourning as that prevailing at Court.

Ladies who visit the Royal palaces have to be very careful how they attire themselves, though the rules as to dress are not quite so strict as they were in the days of Queen Victoria. Speaking of the etiquette observed at the Court of St. James's during the reign of her late Majesty, Count Paul Vassili, the author of "Society in Berlin," said: "The ladies at the Drawing Room have to wear the three white feathers of the Prince of Wales's escutcheon planted straight up in front, like the crest of a certain bird, or that of a Sioux chief. If the plumes of any of these ladies are not correctly placed the lady is sent back by her mirror. Mrs. Langtry . . . presented herself one day with a graceful coiffure, in which the three traditional plumes were somewhat coquettishly arranged. A chamberlain was sent to the beautiful lady to ask her either to arrange her plumes according to etiquette or to withdraw."

A Private Call From the Queen.

"The Court etiquette often gives rise to amusing episodes, a great number of which might be told. One day an American wanted to be present at a levee in a short jacket, yellow waistcoat and black necktie (who knows whether he had not made a bet on it?). Mr. Dallas, the United States Minister, took the part of his eccentric countryman; but, being offended at the strict orders, he left the Court with his friend."

When the lady has the honour of a private call from the Queen, that lady should deny herself to any other caller during the visit, and it is considered etiquette for the lady of the house to accompany Her Majesty downstairs when she departs. If the King or Queen is entertained by any one, Court rules have it that no one who has not been presented at Court should be asked to meet their Majesties unless ordered to do so by the Royal visitors. Again, when anyone pays a visit to a member of Royalty, he or she should not rise or take his or her leave until a sign of gracious dismissal is given. When the King or Queen visits a private house, however, it is not against etiquette for anyone to retire before His or Her Majesty; but in earlier years to do so was considered the height of bad manners. During the reign of Queen Victoria ladies of the Court were forbidden to seat themselves without permission when in the presence of Her Majesty. Now they are permitted to sit down when the Queen sits, without being asked to do so.

King Edward's Card-Indexes.

Several persons of importance when first presented to King Edward expressed their amazement at the marvellous knowledge His Majesty possessed concerning their affairs, their achievements, and the members of their family. As people never obtained access to His Majesty without a previous appointment or invitation, the Sovereign had plenty of time to order those under him to look up particulars of the "caller" and place the same before him. In this way the King became quite intimate with the affairs of the majority of the people who entered his palace.

Items of Interest.

Flowered silk coats, recalling the palest days of French empire, are seen this season. They are worn with lace skirts for dinner gowns.

Trimnings for dress shoes consist of leather bows and buckles at the throat of the vamp, and fancy buttons of pearl, crystal and cut jet.

Full-length gowns for the boudoir are nearly all made in the classic princess form, with wide effect at the waist, but with few, if any gathers at the top.

Overblouses, whether of chiffon, net or tulle, continue in favor. A single overblouse may be worn with several different slips, quite transforming each.

Jabots of the Madeira eyelet work are usually attractive. Frills for the fancy blouse made of this handwork give an air to one's costume quite to be desired.

The high black boots with the lattice-work design extending from the low vamp to the top, and heavily beaded in jet, are among the most effective dress shoes.

Mother of pearl, cut in odd shapes, is most effective when wrought into the handwork on a gown. It takes the place of the colored jewels so much seen last season.

Nerves Were Exhausted

Wants others to know of her remarkable cure by use of DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Mrs. Martin's condition as described in her letter below gives some idea of the extraordinary reconstructive power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Such cures as this have placed Dr. Chase's Nerve Food where it stands today as the most popular and most effective nerve restorative that money will buy.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes:—"Before I began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor in a faint. I could not even sweep the floor without fainting and my nervous system seemed to be entirely exhausted."

"The use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has built up my system wonderfully so that I can do my housework and washing without any trouble, and I want others to know about it." In a letter on getting the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts. a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Ed. Manson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

less strict each year, it is not surprising that this year practically all the prevailing shapes and fancies of colored dresses are repeated in mourning fabrics.

The new veillings are indeed fascinating. They are exceedingly fine; in fact, it would not be at all difficult to draw an entire bolt of some of the flimsy materials through one's finger ring.

A little out of the ordinary are the moccasins made of doe skin or heavy white suede instead of the chamois. They are embroidered elaborately on the front with beads in white and the soft greens, yellow, pinks and blues.
