A Contrast and a Lesson.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Two elderly women sat in the seat in front of me on the trolley the other day. One wore a rather fussy dark green suit and a green hat with a pink feather on it. She looked well enough. The other wore a simple black suit relieved by a white collar and cuffs, and on her silver hair a little plain black hat, exquisitely smart in its perfect simplicity. She looked adorable. The Colors They Could Wear and the Colors They Should Wear. Whenever I see a contrast like that I wonder why all elderly women do not dress, not in the colors that they share with all ages but in the colors that belong as distinctively to them as baby blue to a baby or vivid greens to a smart youngish woman with a clear skin. Respectable dark blues, sensible greens, commonplace browns, a dash of pink or yellow,—any of these an elderly woman may wear with perfect propriety but without a particle of distinction. Whereas black, white, lavender and grey belong to age, they are as exquisitely in keeping with it as the scent of roses is in keeping with the witchery of a June night. An old lady with silver hair in a gown of lavender is one of the satisfying congruities of life. It gives one a sense of things as they should be. It is like a stately house fittingly furnished forth with beautiful old mahogany furniture instead of with handsome unsuitable modern fittings. It is like an old fashioned garden still sweet with tea roses and sweet Williams and mignonette.

Lavender, White, Grey and Black.

But suppose lavender is not becoming, you say. I can't believe that there would not be some shade of lavender which would be becoming to any white haired lady. Besides, lavender is not the only color which belongs to the afternoon of life. Dig-nified black with the relief of as much white as is necessary, certain shades of grey,—not the horrible drab greys but the soft silver greys and the greys with a glint of blue or pink or lavender in them,—and for house gowns the softer shades of white, the white of white wool or of old lace, are all by right of eminence domain the property of the grey or silver haired lady.

Surely among them all any elderly woman can design costumes which while they may not make her look young will do something infinitely better than that,—they will make her look an exquisite old lady which is one of the sweetest things in all the world.

Questions and Answers.

Miss Stenographer wants to know if I think it is a good thing to read on the trolley cars.

Reply.—I suppose you mean is it good for the eyes. I once asked my oculist the same question and he answered, "It's not the best thing for the eyes but that's where I do most of my reading." Of course busy people have few chances so good to keep up with the literature of the day. If you do decide to risk the possible harm, choose as good a light as possible, don't let the shadow of objects you are passing fall on your book, don't read too long at a time, don't read through a veil and don't read at night.

At the House.

Friday, May 28th.

The Colonial Secretary tabled replies to questions asked by Messrs. Parsons, Stone and Target.

A copy of the Report of the Harbor Grace Marine Dock was tabled in response to a question asked by Mr. Parsons.

Mr. Lloyd referred to his question concerning the importation of paint for lighthouses in lieu of giving local patronage.

The Premier informed Mr. Lloyd that he would attend to the matter.

The House went into Committee on Ways and Means, and the Public Service Bill was introduced.

Mr. Morine asked if the Department of Agriculture intended distributing seed potatoes the coming year.

Mr. Bevan replied that the local boards would have to purchase seeds out of their own grants.

On the second reading of the Council's amendments to the Codfish Hill, Mr. Morine expressed his objections to the way the Legislative Council had dealt with the Bill sent up for their consideration. He said that in its amended form it is utterly useless and would be better rejected altogether. The bill was apparently entirely misunderstood in the Upper House, and the amendments suggested were altogether unreasonable. Their notion of substituting an appointee of outport members was truly a fantastic one. The whole machinery suggested by the Council for the carrying out of the Bill was unworkable. They had added to the difficulties of approaching the Supreme Court in case one of the parties failed to make an appointment, and if the Board should be fully appointed they had taken from the Board the power to obtain data to fix a fair price. He moved that the motion for a second reading of the amendments be not concurred in, and that a message be sent to the Legislative Council to the effect, together with reasons for the rejection for the setting forth of which he moved the appointment of a Select Committee.

Mr. Coaker, in an earnest speech, supported the motion. He spoke in the interests of the fishermen whose interests had evidently been ignored in introducing such amendments.

The Premier also wished to give the notice his hearty support. He took the occasion to congratulate Mr. Coaker on the earnest stand he had taken on behalf of the fishermen, and wished to concur in all that had been said by the previous speakers.

Mr. Kent agreed thoroughly with what had been said, and felt that a Board should be constituted impartially.

Mr. Lloyd also wished to express his concurrence in what had been said regarding the amendments, and said that in his opinion it was unworthy of the House to concur with the same.

Mr. Parsons, as representing a Labrador fishery district, wished so to support the motion, as did also Mr. Grimes. Mr. Morine's motion was thereupon unanimously carried, and a committee consisting of the Premier, the Minister of Fisheries, Mr. Kent, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Coaker and Mr. Morine was appointed to deal with the matter.

The Train Ferry Service Bill passed the Committee stage, and the Exportation of Timber Bill was read a second time.

The House then went into Committee on the Railway Loan Bill.

The Minister of Finance, in introducing the Bill, stated that the rate of interest had been raised from 3 1/2 to 4 per cent. in accordance with the suggestions of the Government's financial advisers in London. When the Premier visited London in May last with the intention of floating a 3 1/2 per cent. loan, the Colony's financial advisers suggested that a 4 per cent. loan would be more attractive, and consequently the 3 1/2 per cent. loan was not offered but a temporary loan at 4 per cent. was raised.

Mr. Lloyd asked if the Government had sought any advice from their financial agents recently as to the conditions which prevail at present in the money market.

The Premier replied that they had not, and added that he thought that no loans were being issued at the present time.

Mr. Lloyd then informed the House that only quite recently the Victoria Government raised a loan of $12,000,000 at 4 1/2 per cent. and a few weeks before Canada floated a large 4 1/2 per cent. loan at 99.

Two other sets of Resolutions were passed; one to authorize the Government to borrow $500,000 from the Bank of Montreal and pay it back within three years. This loan has been already arranged, it is to meet the anticipated deficit on June 30th; the other authorized issue of debenture to repay the latter loan at 4 1/2 per cent.

The Resolutions were passed and the Bills read a first time.

The Premier moved the suspension of the Rules of the House, and announced that the Legislature will probably close on Saturday next.

Mr. Hallford's motion for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into expenditures of road grants in Victoria Village, was dealt with by the Auditor General.

The House adjourned at 6 p.m. until Monday next at 3 o'clock.

From the "Union Signal."

We still hear sounding in our ears almost the last words of President Stevens, of the W. C. T. U.:

"You represent the greatest organized moral force of womankind. I know you will not shun the struggle. I know that when the battle is the hardest you are the bravest. I know you are never faint-hearted, but will go on and on, bringing nearer each day the glad and glorious tomorrow of National Constitutional Prohibition."

"It's been a long way to Prohibition. To the fairest land we know. It's been a long way to Prohibition. It's been a long way to go."

"So good-by to Local Option. High License we'll not spare. It's a long, long way to Prohibition. But we're almost there."

British Control of Alcohol.

The statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the House of Commons recently on the effect of drink on the output of munitions of war, and the government proposals for coping with it, have aroused the greatest interest. Mr. Lloyd George showed, quoting numerous statistics in support of his statements, that, in one case at least, what was equivalent to 30 per cent of the normal working hours were lost during the week, the cause being the consumption of alcohol.

There will be no one in England who is averse from the government taking some steps to put a stop to what is interfering to so large an extent with the output of munitions of war. That all are not agreed as to the measures to be adopted is equally true. Many, for example, advocate total prohibition; but not the majority. During several weeks searching inquiries have been made by the government, and the result has been the proposals which have already appeared in the columns of this newspaper.

Clearly, then, the consumption of alcohol is proved to be an evil. It might, therefore, be legitimately asked why an evil, and especially so glaring an evil as it has been proved to be, should be checked for a period only, namely, for the duration of the war. If the men, and therefore, the country, are better without alcohol at one time, they will always be better without it. If the men can work better at one time without it they will always work better means better homes, greater comfort and prosperity. The proposals referred to constitute a step in the right direction, and it may rightly be assumed that a large number of men the immense advantage of dispensing with alcohol will be forcibly brought home.

Speaking of the war and its effects, a well-known diplomatist in London said: "It is bringing out two things, it is bringing out the best and it is bringing out the worst in men's characters. I see it in every direction." If one of the effects proves to be increased temperance, it will be a good thing, but to the extent that the effect is total abstinence it will be far better.—Christian Science Monitor, May 19, 1915.

Secret Rat Caused B

(From the)
That the German squadron defeated the Pacific fleet of the United States under Admiral Craddock on the Chilean coast recently, learned the position of the English vessel through the secret and powerful less station later seized at Lower California, is the belief of D. Madden, British Vice Consul, Ensenada.

Madden has issued a statement lining the alleged operations of the plant and this statement was taken to Los Angeles yesterday by T. Morgan, a well known mining operator, of 1917 West Jefferson Street, who has come here on business connected with his Santa Cruz mine, Mexico.

"Choosing the deserted mining camp of Alamo, on the Coahuila des-ert, which has an elevation of 4,800 feet above sea level, and about 10 miles from the Pacific coast, erected their station on a spur of the Alamo peak, and adjoining the mine shaft house and the cement foundations of the hoisting engine to their engine and dynamo on," said Madden.

Spot Well Protected.

"The station office and the masts, each 140 feet in height, are located on a knoll at an elevation of 200 feet above the mine. It is not possible to approach the property without being seen, and anyone attempting to do so was promptly warned and warned away.

"Through the connivance of a German-American at San Diego, agent for a steamship company, and a resident of San Diego who owned a launch, the wireless equipment was shipped from San Diego to Ensenada as 'baggage' in order to evade the United States customs regulations. This baggage was represented as the property of two men who were burgled at or near San Francisco.

"The six-inch spiral riveted columns and the cedar poles together with the dynamo and other material were shipped as ordinary freight to the Ensenada Custom House, the instruments were declared parts of mining equipment of a new prospect for discovering gold, and the property was passed as miners.
