The Week's War

The reader who carefully follows the cabled despatches will have no difficulty in tracing the line of the German retreat, which began a little over a week ago. The object of the Allied advance is to cause a forced evacuation of French territory held by the enemy, and it is proceeding slowly but surely, and military commentators are of opinion that it is bound to continue. In proof of this they submit that under the pressure of the Allies the enemy has been compelled to use troops which he was holding in reserve for future operations, while the former have been mastering him with their line formations only, and have not drawn upon their reserves. Increased losses were met in the violent reactions of the enemy for the purpose of covering his retreat and protecting a line which has already insufficient communications. Not alone are the Allies pressing their advantage by frontal attacks, but they have drawn up closely behind their lines many guns of all calibres, and are shelling the German areas as far back as Bethencourt on the Somme, a distance of seven and a half miles East of Chaumes. Simultaneously with the artillery bombardments allied aeroplanes continue bombing enemy positions and are using machine guns from low altitudes on his troop formations and movements. Tracks of the large tank "whippets" constructed have been performing valuable services at small cost to themselves. A correspondent at the front tells a thrilling story of one bit of work done, which reads like a novel:

"At one small town south of the Amiens-Roye road, the French sent word to the British that they could not advance, because of the enemy's heavy machine gun fire. Five ponderous armoured monsters immediately went over and rolled directly into the place. Their crews discovered that the houses were crowded with German machine gun crews. One tank leapt forward and advanced upon a house while a hail of bullets splashed off its metal hide. After reconnoitering at close range it lugged off and charged home. Its great weight crushing in the whole building and flattening out the structure as it passed over the ruins, completely effaced the machine gunners. After this the whole five engaged in the operation of rolling down and flattening out nine other houses, while also engaging various groups of the enemy."

General progress is continuing and despatches are hopeful, while public opinion in Paris is sanguine. On the other hand there seems to be considerable depression and some dismay in Germany. With the French in possession of the high ground on the Lagny Massif, the French name for thickets as distinguished from a forest) they are in a position to outflank that town, an operation which will force the Germans to fall back as far as Noyon, six miles up the River Oise. A late dispatch Saturday that the British have pushed forward their lines to the Eastward, North of the Amiens-Roye road, and North of the Amiens River may be taken as an indication of hastening the surrender of Lagny itself, which will be of great military advantage, as this town was an outstanding point in the German advance, and it promises to be equally prominent in their retirement. Should the German retirement on the Aisne be continued by the steady pressure of the Allied forces, he will in all probability be forced to retreat to the Chemin des Dames line, which position he held before the big drive of May 27th and it may be safe to assume that he will choose this position for the making of a new Hindenburg line. In that event the enemy would be about the point from which he started the March 21st offensive, for his line between the Rivers Aisne and Oise, from Soissons to Tervuren would have to be withdrawn as well. Should the present advance of the Allies accomplish the task which they have set, within the first few weeks, and succeed in getting the enemy across the Aisne, it would be no bad gain, as this would enable them to return and complete their operations in the north, which were interrupted at Passchendaele by last fall's bad weather. If the present season's campaign could be so rounded off and finished it would leave the Allies in the best possible position, both morally and materially, for beginning operations against the enemy next spring. The captures of prisoners and guns have broken all Western Front records. Official reports from Field Marshal Haig give the total numbers for the first three days of the allied advance as 28,000 officers and men and 650 guns for the French First Army and the British Fourth Army alone. Other reports, unofficial, since, place the number of prisoners at 40,000, which may be well within these figures. The hour of deliverance for France is now at hand.

From the Italian and Eastern Theatres but minor reports of operations have come through. Patrol and aerial raids on the enemy positions have been carried out with success, and both sides maintain continuous artillery fighting. The Allies have determined to re-sound the cause of Russia and help is now being sent to the Constitutional elements in that unhappy country. As Murmansk the population re-joiced with joy the British force landed there recently. Cabled news from Russia cannot be accepted at its face value and unless officially promulgated is not worth consideration. Enemy subs appear to be operating on this side with some small measures of success, which, however, are not calculated to have any effect. The sinking of a few fishing vessels does not in any way help the Germans. The only disturbing factor is the presence of the U-boats and the possibility that they may have hidden bases along parts of the desolate coast line of the Bay of Fundy and the New England Coast.

Here is a prophecy by the famous war correspondent, Philip Gibbs, in the Daily Chronicle. It is one to which all will say Amen:

"The fate of the world will be decided before the leaves turn brown, 'on this year's trees, and perhaps 'before the harvest is gathered in.' I believe that it will be decided in 'our favor, though the enemy is 'still immensely strong.'"

$5,000 for Patriotic Purposes.

We understand that the patriotic authorities here have just received a very handsome gift from the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company of a sum of Five thousand dollars altogether—twenty-five hundred of this to go to the Patriotic Fund, and twelve hundred and fifty to the Women's Patriotic Association, and twelve hundred and fifty to the Red Cross. This exceedingly generous contribution will be most acceptable to these three organizations, and especially will the large donation to the Coe Fund prove very timely in view of the appeal now being made in the papers by His Excellency the Governor for assistance for this deserving object. The generosity of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. is praiseworthy in the extreme and shows that the principals of these Canadian ore mining companies are fully alive to the part Newfoundland is playing in the War, because the Dominion Iron and Steel Company only a few months ago contributed handsomely to the Patriotic Fund.

Where Indeed?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—It is stated in the press that the Ministry of Shipping has posted in the Board of Trade rooms a notice warning Shipowners and Masters of the danger attending voyages which, it is stated, are at the Owners or Masters' risk. Could incapacity or inability to judge from this notice. When, for goodness sake, was it the case that voyages were undertaken except at the Owners and Captain's risk? Whose else should be the risk? And since when has it been the case that British owners or masters shrink from necessary risk? Fancy the Ministry of Shipping in Great Britain or America issuing such a notice! Where should we have been now if this spirit animated British authorities since the war started? Shipowners and Seamen have trouble enough these days without having a neurotic Shipping Ministry trying to start a panic among seamen.

Yours truly,
NEPTUNE.

Obituary.

LOUIS OSMOND.

It is with feelings of sincere regret that we have to chronicle the passing of Louis Osmond, of Morton's Hill, known far and wide as "Lou."

No kinder gentleman, or more thoughtful and loving husband and father ever drew breath, and it was the writer's privilege to have been numbered with his friends.

A short time ago he arrived from the Treaty Shore suffering from a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia, and day by day the first question on so many people's lips was a thought of how it fared with him in his fight for life. Thursday of last week a hope of improvement was held out, but Friday he was not so well, and Saturday the case was most critical. All night Monday Dr. Wood stayed with him in the attempt to win against death, but the end came despite the best medical assistance could do, and Louis Osmond ended life and began immortality.

He leaves this world the poorer for his fellowship—and what greater eulogy can be given a man than this. Throughout the length of the Treaty Shore, the Pauline will no more bring Louis Osmond, and the presence of that well-known and frequent visitor there will remain but a remembrance. To the bereaved widow and fatherless children, and to sister and brothers, the Sun extends its sincere and heartfelt sympathy, assuring them that their loss is realized by a very large circle of friends who admired and esteemed the dead.

And so Louis Osmond, will be gathered to his fathers, and after the short months the world will have forgotten him. But among the circle of his friends—and it is a very large one—he will long be held in remembrance, and many a kind deed and generous action will be preserved in memory, for these are the things that do not die.—Twilight Sun.

Amen!

I watched for him as I watched them
I knew how brave he would look and grand.
And every veteran's face I scanned
With the light of joy was beaming;
But one there comes looking grandly tall.

The sunset rays on him brighter fall
He looks the loveliest of them all—
Or perhaps 'tis but to my seeming—

I looked again and my heart grew numb.
For a whisper said that "he had not come!"
Then my wild glance swept long the line for some Frenchmate of his long campaigning—

But I looked in vain, for I saw no more—
A strange mist gathered my eyes before—
And I must have swooned, for o'er and o'er
I harkened a voice complaining.

And ever I saw a soldier who
Had sailed away with Puttees blue,
Full well his manly form I knew
And saw a hand in greeting,
But he heeded not, for his eyes were bent

On a sad-faced mother, with a look
Who was dreaming then of the boy she sent.
And whose heart leaped now to the meeting.

Then I knew that every heart that day
Could see the lad it had sent away,
The Balkans' moon, in a grave unknown
In some deep ravine 'mid the mountains lone
Where the war-scorched winds from
The Balkans' moor, in a grave unknown
O'er dust of the Newfoundlanders.

"Come soon sweet Peace to our
Is the mothers' cry as each day departs
And we pray the while—tho' the sad
ears stare
And our eyes are filled with this spirit
That our martyred brave, who have borne—oh Lord,
Into the Battle Freedom's sword,
Be led by thee to that Great Reward
That rests in the Father's keeping."

No More Book-Keeping.

Mr. Storekeeper, did you know that with the new NATIONAL Credit Register which was invented last year, the latest and most improved invention of its kind, you can now safely dispense with bookkeeping. No daybook is necessary, no laborious writing out of monthly accounts. The new system with one writing keeps an up-to-the-minute statement of each account, and can never get behind.

You don't need to experiment. Our new file has been adopted in about 30 lines of business. Write for list of satisfied users in Newfoundland.

The National Credit File is fireproof, and the most compact file made—only ten and a half inches high. Certain files are so-called fireproof, but there is not a slip file on the market (outside of the National Credit File) which is proof against mistakes, carelessness and temptation. A merchant may insure himself against loss of goods by fire, but he cannot realise anything on goods lost through FORGOTTEN CHARGES, through dissatisfied customers, and through mistakes and carelessness.

Remember in dealing with Mr. Chown you are dealing directly with the National Cash Register Co. The National Account Register carries the same guarantee as our Cash Registers, which has made our name famous the world over.

National Cash Registers from $50.00 to suit every kind of business—large or small—pay for themselves out of the money they save.

Write or wire for particulars and prices. We supply freight and duty paid, on easy monthly terms of payment if desired, without extra charge, or allow a liberal discount for cash. Call and inspect the specimen file at our office.
