

RHEUMATISM

If sufferers from rheumatism could read all the testimonials we receive, they would not hesitate to accept our offer of a free trial sample of Gin Pills.

Mrs. E. W. Hazlett of Windsor, Ont., writes: "Gin Pills, I know from personal experience, are the sovereign remedy for rheumatism and kidney troubles in any form. I was helped by them, after months of suffering. I tried many other remedies, but all failed; then I tried Gin Pills, with the result that I am well to-day."

Gin Pills relieve by removing the cause. Write for a free sample to: National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont. U. S. Address: National Drug Co., Inc., 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

LONDON GOSSIP.

PRINCE OF WALES AND RACING.

The Prince of Wales's tour through the provinces deferred the completion of the racing season. His Royal Highness intended to take in racing; but on his return from Australia it is understood that he will undertake some part of the Sandringham and the royal stables. While in Australia he carefully studied racing methods there and took in several races for gentlemen riders, winning some of these events. On leaving Sydney he was presented with Kinglake, the winner of the Australian Steeplechase, and the hope has been expressed that this horse may be entered for the Grand National next year. The Prince of Wales took great interest in the regimental races organized by the troops in France, and he is an accomplished horseman. Sometime ago His Royal Highness was elected a member of the Jockey Club, and this was heralded as the first step in his turf career.

A CHALLENGE TO STUDENTS.

London University students are keenly interested in the discussions by the intellectual highbrows of the British Association on the subject of "large yells, and the implication being that Cardiff students have achieved a premier distinction in the matter, the suggestion is made that they must "see what they can do about it." Although college cries are already competitive in their character, the attention which they have received from the British Association is sure to inspire students throughout the country to even keener rivalry. There is the prospect of competitions among the London colleges, and the wider prospect of students throughout the country, with a Glasgow team to back "Ggorra," challenged to contest again a co-ordinated howl evoked for London University. At present Ggorra has a kind of imitation of an engine whistle disappearing into a tunnel, Bart's, when they are in form, might be a pack of transmigrated wolves; but it is recognized that something there is nothing in London to compete with the cries of the North American Hurons or the matrimonial yell of the primitive anthropoids.

PEN AND PENCIL FIGHTERS.

War stories are somewhat of a discount but the book on which Sir Campbell Stuart has been working for some time is likely to make entertaining reading. It is an account of the methods and experiences of those who were responsible for the British propaganda work during the war. Sir Campbell can write on the subject with some authority, as during the latter part of the war, after his return from the position of British Embassy in London, he became Deputy Director of Propaganda at Crewe House. There are some dramatic and exciting tales of the manner in which the literature prepared by the staff at Crewe House was introduced into Germany. The various books of memoirs published in Berlin during the last eighteen months, and in many cases reprinted in this country, have proved that the propaganda was very disconcerting to the German Higher Command. Sir Campbell Stuart is by birth a Canadian, having been born in Montreal, and was responsible for the organization of the battalion of the Irish Canadian Rangers, which he recruited in the Province of Quebec.

PAPER CLOTHES.

At the Imperial War Museum at the Crystal Palace I happened upon the new exhibits of paper clothes which have just been added as specimens of a German war-time production. They recalled to memory experiences during the Armistice advance in Belgium. In some of the villages which the Germans had evacuated after a prolonged occupation they left elaborately equipped billets, and in nearly all the beds there were strong, clean paper pillowcases filled with wood shavings. Quantities of rope, also made of paper, were discovered in different places, the finds at the time being of the greatest interest to the troops, who had not previously known of their existence. The Crystal Palace exhibits are of higher quality, and include such articles of clothing as men's striped trousers and ladies' blouses and nightdresses. In appearance many of them are almost identical with creations of more lasting material, colored insertions helping considerably to add to the deception.

COSTUMES ON CHANGE.

London Stock Exchange men have always had the reputation of being among the best dressed in business. Of late years a much greater freedom of style and choice has been noticeable. The "topper" is becoming scarce, while the "bowler" is also much less frequently worn. The favorite, almost universal, headgear nowadays seems to be the Homburg or soft felt squash hat, the smartest shade of which is grey with a black band. The frock coat has long been abandoned, and now even the swallow-tail is seldom seen in the city. The city man who wants to be in the fashion to-day wears a black jacket and vest, with grey—preferably check—trousers. The Homburg, also in grey, the inevitable pair of white spats, and a silk colored handkerchief, which just peeps from his breast pocket, but which, in many cases has been artfully arranged there for show purposes, serves to complete the picture. The final touch is afforded by a straight silver-headed maulance cane and a pair of rather bright yellow chamot leather gloves.

For less "greasy" occasions, the stiff colored turn-down collar is increasingly in favor.

TRADE SLUMP—A RAY OF HOPE.

A city friend tells me that business has not been at so low an ebb since the armistice as it is now. The pressure of the banks has eliminated most of the speculators from the markets, but in various commodities, for instance, in tea, woollens, and some non-ferrous metals, there are accumulations of produce which holders would be only too pleased to market if they could find buyers. But with money tight, the labor outlook threatening, and the impression widely held that unemployment will be serious this winter, the buyer has become a very elusive bird. Manufactured articles are being delivered to the wholesalers in fulfillment of old contracts at a far more rapid rate than the retailers can take them up, with the result that stocks are now beginning to accumulate in warehouses. On the other hand, I hear that the outlook in the textile trade is brightening. Good foreign orders are beginning to come again, and manufacturers who, a fortnight ago, would have been glad to close their works in the event of a coal strike, now desire to keep their mills running.

DANCING REVIVAL.

Dancing mistresses are again mobilizing their forces for the autumn season. As usual, a number of new and intricate dances are being announced by those who make their living by instruction, in the hope of swelling the ranks of their pupils. It is more than probable that these adaptations of the old tango and the new steps said to come from Spain will go the way of so many other novelties and set no further than the floors of those small rooms where "select classes" are put through their paces. One well-known London instructor has made a determined effort to reintroduce the tango for two years, and tells us once more this season that in a rejuvenated form it will be danced everywhere this winter. The truth of the matter seems to be that London is quite satisfied with the simplified fox trot and o.s.e.p., and is far too lazy to learn anything elaborate.

HOT-AIR CORNER.

The enduring popularity of the open air meetings at Hyde Park is one of the greatest mysteries of London's life. Last evening the open spaces and avenues of Hyde Park, seen in the twilight under a misty moon, might have tempted all the young and active to wander, but many hundreds of them preferred to stand in tightly-packed groups listening to the orators who never seem to take a holiday. Anyone can draw an audience. He need not even stand on a platform or a candle box. He need not have anything to say—indeed, the art of Hyde Park oratory seems to be to take an interminable time getting to a point that is not there. Nearly all the speakers have a leisurely manner and a love of involved sentences that would make the organizers of an indoor meeting want to lock the doors lest the wearied audience should run away. The outdoor people do not mind. You may ask a man who has been listening intently to some speaker for a quarter of an hour what it is all about. "I don't know," he will say, and listen as intently as before.

GREEN APPLE TIME.
Green apple time! Oh the joy
Once more to be a healthy boy
Casting a longin' greedy eye
At every tree he passes by
Riskin' the direct consequence
To sneak inside a neighbor's fence
An' shake from many a laced limb
The fruit that seems so near to him.
Gosh! but once more I'd like to be
The boy I was in eighty-three.

Here I am sittin' with my pipe
Waitin' for apples to get ripe;
Waitin' until the friendly sun
Has buzzed 'em all an' says they're done.

Not darin' any more to climb
An' pick a few afore their time.
No legs to run, no teeth to chew
The way that healthy youngsters do,
Just 'ol' 'nough to sit an' wait
An' pick my apple from a plate.

Plate apples ain't to be compared
With those you've ventured for an'
dared.
It's wakin' 'em from branches high,
Or nippin' 'em when no one's by,
Or findin' 'em the times you feel
You really need another meal,
Or comin' unexpectedly
Upon a farmer's loaded tree
An' grabbin' all that you can eat
That goes to make an apple sweet.

Green apple time! Go to it boy
An' cram yourself right full o' joy.
Watch for the farmer's dog an' run
There'll come a time it can't be done.
There'll come a day you can't digest
The fruit you've stuffed into your vest
Nor climb, but you'll sit down like me
An' watch 'em ripenin' on the tree
An' jus' like me you'll have to wait
To pick your apples from a plate.
