Life in the Wilds of Newfoundland

Dr. Dr. Hemmeon Gave An Interesting Address On The Subject Before The Rotary Club.

"Life in the Wilds of Newfoundland" was the subject of an exceptionally interesting address, in which the speaker, Rev. Dr. Hemmeon, of St. John's, gave an interesting account of his game and bird shooting in the neighbouring colony, before the members of the Halifax Rotary Club at yesterday's luncheon in the Green Room. Dr. Hemmeon, who spent several years in Newfoundland in connection with his ministerial duties, proved to have a thorough knowledge of the Newfoundland hunting grounds, which he termed a sportsman's paradise.

He gave many of his audience a surprise when he stated that there were no moose to be found on the Island. He explained that many people claim that there are a few there, but in all his experience at hunting on the Island, he had never heard of them. The speaker described the climate of the Colony and stated that it was not suitable for moose, although caribou could be found in large numbers on any part of the Island. He told of an experience made several years ago when a number of moose had been taken to the Island with a view of establishing them permanently, but stated that these had all been shot during the past few years, and that there were none to be found here at the present time.

The Newfoundland Game Laws. Speaking of caribou hunting on the Island, Dr. Hemmeon stated that there were at least 300,000 on the Island and that every year at least 1,000 were shot by sportsmen and inhabitants. The game laws on the Island allow each inhabitant to shoot three annually. The speaker compared the enforcement of game laws in Newfoundland to that in Canada, stating that very little protection was given the game in the Colony as compared with Canada. He related an incident where one man had shot six caribou and then had wired to his son to come and claim three of the carcasses. This, he gave as an illustration to show how plentiful the animals were.

Dr. Hemmeon also briefly outlined the habits of the various birds to be found on the Island and compared them to those to be found anywhere along the coast from Florida to Newfoundland, stating that if a person was to shoot shore birds at intervals of a hundred miles between Florida and Newfoundland, and place them alongside each other, they would be found to be alike in almost every respect.

At the conclusion of Dr. Hemmeon's address, two violin selections were rendered by Julius Silverman, the local violinist, both selections being well received by the audience. J. J. Penny occupied the chair.—Morning Chronicle.

Swedes Have Cut Timber for One Thousand Years

Stockholm.—Sweden's work of forest conservation has managed to keep the lead in the neck-to-neck race with the rapidly increasing output of industrial products, according to a governmental report in which the statement is made that Sweden has "an inexhaustible gold mine in her forests."

This assurance is regarded as of great importance to the nation, since about 60 per cent. of its exports consist of lumber, wood pulp, paper and other forest products. In 1923 these exports alone amounted to a value of about $183,000,000, and in the 12 months ended last June, upwards of $10,000,000 of Swedish wood pulp was shipped to paper mills in the United States.

The forests in Sweden, which have been drawn upon for commercial purposes for at least 1,000 years, now cover about 52 per cent. of the total land area of the country, and consist principally of spruce and pine.

King Sings a Chorus

At a command performance given by Sir Harry Lauder at Balmoral Castle, the comedian sang, at the King's special request, his song, "I love a lassie."

"When I got to the chorus," said Sir Harry, "the whole company joined in, the King and Queen singing as lustily as any and obviously enjoyed every line of it."

The audience included gillies, tenants, and household servants.

Will Tell Club of Far North Trial

L. A. RIVET, K.C., WENT TO ICE
BARRIERS TO MEET OUT JUSTICE.

L. A. Rivet, K.C., will deliver an illustrated lecture to the Club Canadian on October 17 next on his trip to the frozen north made in the interests of Canadian Justice.

Mr. Rivet was appointed to preside over a Court sitting to determine upon whom lay the responsibility for the death of a Newfoundland fur trader, Robert S. James, who was found killed on one of the barren, icy wastes that stretch northward from the Arctic Circle. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police had investigated the circumstances and had arrested three Esquimaux, Noo-Kud-Lah, Oo-Roo-Ree, Unnagh and Ah-Te-Tah, all three of whom they charged with the murder.

The Department of Justice organized a complete tribunal to try these men in their own district, and L. A. Rivet, K.C., was appointed the Judge by special patent. The voyage was made on Captain Bernier's old steamer, the Arctic, and the voyage, including the time for the trial, took three months. In accordance with the laws of the North West territories a jury of only six men was required and this was made up from the ship's company. Nearly all the witnesses were Esquimaux.

Two Found Guilty. At the close of the trial Noo-Kud-Lah, was found guilty of manslaughter, and was sentenced by Mr. Rivet to ten years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary, in Manitoba. Oo-Roo-Ree-Unnagh was also found guilty of manslaughter, but the jury recommended a rider strongly recommending him to the mercy of the court. He received a sentence of two years in the custody of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Ah-Te-Tah was acquitted and released.

The crew of the Arctic included a motion picture operator with his equipment, and many of the pictures that he took will be shown to the audience at the Club Canadian, when Mr. Rivet recounts his experiences while administering justice in the frozen north.—Montreal Star, September 20.

A Record Slaughter

Nearly 80,000,000 Animals Killed for Food in U.S. in a Year.

Slaughter of nearly 80,000,000 animals in establishments operating under Federal meat inspection during the year ended June 30, 1924, is shown by figures recently compiled by the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The exact total is 79,814,060, which is 6,000,000 more animals than were slaughtered during any previous fiscal year.

Hogs were the most numerous of all classes of stock, there being 54,416,483 of these animals slaughtered. This number, nearly three-fifths of the total, is also a new high mark. Calves slaughtered during the record-breaking year numbered 4,667,948, which is also the largest number on the records of the United States meat inspection service for any year. Cattle and sheep killed under the supervision of Government inspectors numbered 1,88,952 and 11,505,001, respectively.

This record slaughter of animals indicates an increased total meat consumption in the United States, as would be expected with the growing population. It also shows what a comprehensive service the United States Department of Agriculture renders in the inspection of the Nation's meat supply.

Eating Apples in Public

(From the Portland Oregonian.) We can see no good reason why there should not be a renaissance of apple-eating in public, frankly and without embarrassment. The apple is a fruit well adapted to the requirement of the pedestrian, and may be consumed on any crowded street without inconvenience to the consumer or peril to his fellow creatures. This is obviously not true of the orange, and, alas, it most emphatically is not true of the banana. The apple is innocuous. It harbors no ill-will toward mankind, and is, in its every aspect, the most friendly of fruits.

For the life of us we cannot see any indecency in yielding to an apple in public—that is to say, on the streets. The eating thereof could not possibly offend the most captious, and would result in the stimulation of a great industry if it became the common practice. We can well imagine that many citizens who mix their morning ozone with cigar and cigarette smoke, would feel altogether more capable and energetic if they munch an apple as they proceeded to the office.

Sold Their Tresses

There is still a great market for human hair, and even the almost universal bobbing of women's hair has failed to satisfy the demand. In pre-war days the great market for hair was Limoges, France, and the Hair Fair was an amazing sight. Girls with beautiful tresses would line up while dealers—who had come from all over the world—would pass down the ranks and make offers for any head of hair which attracted them.

Bobbed hair has lessened the vogue
for earrings and altered their style.
Small, close designs are the only that suit the average bobbed hair.
