PROCESSES ABOLISH DEATH PENALTY

Russian Parliament Unanimous in Passing a Bill Against It.

SESSION A STORMY ONE

Group of Toll Refuses to Listen to Speech of Military Procurator.

S. T. PETERSBURG, July 3.—The afternoon sitting of the lower house of parliament today, which was devoted to the discussion of the law providing for the abolition of the death penalty, broke up in utter disorder when Gen. Pavloff, the military procurator, attempted to address the house in behalf of War Minister Budiger.

His appearance in the tribune was the signal for an outburst of cries of "murderer assassin," "organizer of Jewish massacres," from the members of the group of toll, in which the left joined.

The members of the house pounded their desks, shouted and resorted to every violent means of showing their displeasure.

Pavloff Leaves Tribune Gen. Pavloff after listening to the storm for several minutes, turned to President Mourousteff, bowed, and half smiling signified his acceptance of the situation and left the tribune.

M. Mourousteff, who appeared to be annoyed at the demonstration, endeavored to quell it with his voice and the violent ringing bell used in calling the house to order, but he gave up the effort.

Later word was passed among the members that an attempt would be made to resume the session at the expiration of an hour. Gen. Pavloff, willing to make another effort to deliver his speech in case M. Mourousteff so desired.

The appearance of Pavloff was preceded by a long speech from Prof. Kuzmin Karaviev introducing the bill providing for the abolition of the death penalty.

Decides to Persevere Immediately after the session had been broken up the group of toll and the constitutional Democrats called caucuses in their respective parties.

The group of toll decided to make a noisy demonstration in the tribune, and prepared, holding that it is better to drive out one man than have the whole party go out, as they cannot listen to the words of an inveterate group of toll.

The constitutional Democrats resolved to try to dissuade the group of toll from their decision and endeavor to persuade them if they cannot listen to Pavloff to leave the tribune.

The house finally voted unanimously to refer the motion for the abrogation of the death penalty to a committee of 15 to draft a bill, and the sitting adjourned pending the morning for the measure. The session was resumed at 9:45 o'clock tonight, when the bill was adopted unanimously. The house adjourned at 9:55 o'clock.
