HAYWARD HAS CONFESSED

ADMITS HE IS ONE OF THE GUILT

IEST WRETCHES ALIVE.

Blixt Was But His Tool and Would Have Been Killed Also, but was Too Cunning The Arch-Murderer Proposes to Enter Upon His Day of Doom Amid Revelry. Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 10.-Harry

Hayward has confessed. Every shadow of doubt as to his guilt in connection with the murder of Kathering shadow or doubt as to his guilt in connection with the murder of Katherina Ging has been swept away.

Hayward admitted to County Physician Burton that the gallows was about to receive one of the guiltiest wretches of the nineteenth century. He confessed that he alone was the instigator of the murderous plot, and that Claus Blixt was but his tool. Hayward said he intended to kill Blixt, but he could not, as Blixt was too cunning for him.

Hayward is making a gigantic effort to cover up his shattered nerves today, but with poor success. Father Timothy visited the condemned man in his cell, but Hayward refused to embrace the comfort offered by the priest. He will die, as he has lived, with no profession of religion.

Sheriff Holmbeg visited the cell and asked Hayward if there was anything he wished:

"Yes" was the rooty: "I want to asked Hayward if there was anything he wished:

"Yes," was the reply; "I want to give the boys a big spread here tonight, late."

"All right," answered the sheriff;

"you can have anything you want."

Hayward at once set to work and prepared a bill of fare. He has already dressed himself in the black suit which he will wear at his execution. He has purchased a white silk tie and insists upon wearing it.

Many Cranks.

The afternoon and evening preceding

The afternoon and evening preceding the execution were filled with exciting episodes. Cranks of all sorts were numerous and made themselves known freely. Superintendent of Police Smith received another communication today. The chief has received many of these letters. The letter received this morning was neither dated nor signed. It reads as follows:

"Harry Hayward is an innocent man. I murdered Kate Cing in cold blood. She drove my sister to despair and I swore I would get even with her. If you find out who I am, all right, but free that innocent man."

Another crank showed up at the sheriff's office late in the day and caused an exciting scene. A well-dressed woman of refined appearance, about 35 years of age, entered the office and denounced the sheriff and his depjuties as wicked men who were trying to deprive an innocent man of his life.

"How many men have been ruined by girls?" she shrieked. "You will rue the day when you hang Harry Hayward. He is a victim of conspiracy."

A patrol wagon was called and the excited woman was taken to the lock-up, where it was learned that she was a Mrs. Miller of St. Paul. The reason assigned for her strange actions is that she became demented inreading the accounts of the murder and trial. the accounts of the murder and trial. She imagined that she had a divine commission to save the life of the condemned man. Another Plot to Escape.

Another Plot to Escape.

Within three days past Harry Hayward formed another plot to escape, Sitting in his cell to-day with a shorthand reporter, who was taking his last statement, he recited the story:

"Of course every one thought that the great plot of mine to escape was my last," he said; "but it was not. My chances with the scheme I had worked out were good. I will tell you the whole thing. The last few days I thought the business all over and finally came to the conclusion that I had a chance,

"My plan was this: At just three minutes past 12 at night I would fall dowr on the floor of my cell and writhe in anguish as if I had suicided by taking poison. The guards would immediately ring up doctors.

"About five minutes after this three men with long satchels in their hands would present themselves at the jail and state that they were physicians summoned.

"They would be my men and the summoned.

"They would be my men and the satchels would not contain medicine but derringers. The jailors would be sandbagged and my guards taken care of afterwards.

"I would be taken out with a revolver in each hand and a cerviage event.

"I would be taken out with a revolver in each hand and a carriage awaiting me at the door would take me away.
"It it had not been for one slip this scheme would have gone through, you can bet on that."
