

having excellent gravelled and macadamised roads leading into it, having hourly communication by means of an extensive ferry with the rich and fertile County of Prince Edward, possessed with excellent water power privileges for all kinds of manufactures, connected with the chief markets of the Dominion and the United States by water and railway and, withal, having an enterprising people there is nothing to prevent Belleville becoming at no distant period one of the chief cities of Canada