PROSPECTUS

OF THE

SECOND VOLUME OF THE "CANADIAN PRESBYTER."

THE Editors, in projecting a second volume of the "Canadian Presbyterian," have no material change to announce, as regards the form or plan of the Magazine. They are gratified to think that the Periodical, however far from ideal perfection, has filled a real vacancy in Canadian sacred literature, and served the ends for which it was, from the outset, avowedly designed. It will continue to treat the same class of topics and public questions as heretofore, and to maintain the same spirit of independent and fearless, yet it is hoped, wise and temperate discussion.

Convinced that the character and influence of the Magazine must depend mainly on the tone and force of its original articles, the Editors will give their best personal attention to this department, and endeavour to obtain the assistance of various able contributors. It is proposed to allow the writers to attach their initials, if they please, to their own papers, and this plan will be ordinarily followed by the Editors also. In place of literary reviews and notices, a short and pointed Sermon will occasionally be given.

Having underliken in their own names all the risk attending a new publication, and devoting their services gratuitously to the work, the Editors venture to appeal to their brethren and friends, the staunch Presbyterians of Canada, to support the effort by extending the range of the subscription list in their several localities. This appeal is made especially to the Ministers, Elders, Deacons, and more educated and intelligent members of the Church. A magazine of this class is not designed to meet the wants or please the taste of the ignorant; but within the Presbyterian community of Canada, there must be a proportion of educated and enlightened minds amply sufficient to appreciate and sustain a Periodical, that shall attempt something more than a mere chronicle of passing events, or a medley of miscellaneous extracts.

The annual subscription will continue as before.

ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM, PRE-PAID.

A free copy will be given to any one who will send six names to the Publisher with six dollars. The principle of pre-payment was announced at the outset as an absolute condition of subscription and it must be strictly observed. Accordingly envelopes are herewith furnished to subscribers with the respectful request, that they will use them for the remittance of their subscription to the Publisher, Mr. John Lowell, Montreal. Almost every one of the present subscribers might with ease obtain another name, by recommending the Magazine to his friends, and some might obtain a score of new subscribers, by a little personal exertion at the present time. Those who kindly interest themselves in this will not only encourage the Editors, but also contribute to the establishment of this Periodical in a durable position, and to the enlargement of its influence over the ecclesiastical field of Canada.

The Magazine remains under the editorial care of the Rev. D. FRASER, A.M. and the Rev. A. F. KERR.

Montreal, December, 1857.
