

AGRICULTURAL.

From "The Complete Farmer and Rural Economist"
WINTER FOOD FOR COWS.

Mr. Chabert, the director of the veterinary schools of Alfort, had a number of cows which yielded very great quantities of milk. In his publications on the subject he observed that cows fed in winter on dry substances give less milk than those which are kept on a green diet, and also that their milk loses much of its quality. He published the following receipt, by the use of which his cows afforded him an equal quantity and quality of milk during the winter as during the summer. Take a bushel of potatoes, break them while raw, place them in a barrel standing up, putting in successively a layer of potatoes and a layer of bran, and a small quantity of yeast in the middle of the mass, which is to be left thus to ferment during a whole week, and when the vinous taste has pervaded the whole mixture, it is then given to the cows, who eat it greedily.

Pure water is an essential article for cows. Dr. Anderson says he knew a man who acquired great wealth by attention to things of this nature, and one of his principal discoveries was the importance of having a continued supply of the purest water which could be obtained for his cows, and he would on no account permit a single animal to set his foot in it, nor allow it to be tainted even by the breath of animals.

Parsnips cause cows to give milk in abundance, and that of the best quality.

EFFECTS OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.—No one can ride through the town of Winthrop without observing the greater beauty of the farms, and the higher state of cultivation, than prevails generally in the State. This has been in a great measure effected by the Agriculture, in a cotton factory. Do not smile, reader; the factories of Eastern States have been the impelling and most efficient causes of agricultural improvement and the increased value of land. They have furnished the ready home market for the wool, the hides, the fuel, timber, beef, pork, hay, butter, cheese, apples, cider, potatoes, and a great many other vegetables, besides eggs, lamb, veal, and a great many other things, most of which cannot be exported because of their perishable nature, and for none of which there is any foreign market to be depended upon. The Agricultural Societies, agricultural Publications, and the experiments and study of scientific farmers have diffused that knowledge of husbandry which enabled the farmers to supply, from the same land they before tilled, the increased demand created by the manufacturing cities, towns and villages.—Kennebec Journal.

WEED IN GRAIN.—With a view to protect their grain from the weed, the Shakers at Canterbury, N. H. are accustomed to sprinkle their granaries, both floor and sides with fine newly slacked lime; and this had proved with them an effectual preventative.—Yankee Farmer.

GREEN VINES.—Are very easily increased by layers, as they readily root at the joints whenever buried beneath the soil. On a small scale this method is far preferable to increasing them by cuttings, as it is more certain to succeed, and commonly produces in equal time larger and more thrifty plants. The operation consists simply in burying in the soil, a few inches, some of the prostrate branches at the middle, which will take root and may be transplanted next spring, each branch by separation, in the middle at the roots will generally furnish two vigorous plants. A sloping hollow of a few inches in depth, to receive the branches when buried. It is the growth of the present season only which is to be made use of in this operation.
