"You don't say?" returned the fairy of the fiery looke.
"Yes; I do say," responded the manager; "and if my wife does not recover speedily, I can offer you a remunerative engagement for the summer, as well as the ensuing season."

"Not at my terms," interrupted the provoking minx, reguishly.

"Mat are your terms?" he asked.

"A dollar a minute," was the saucy reply; and with that she ran off to the hotel to join her mother in a visit to the sick room.

Contrary to all procedent, Outaway turned out for once to "a show;" and those in the audience who had been in Boston declared that they had nover seen anything better, even at the "Hub."

For some reason which the townspeople did not understand, the city folks were out in force. It was observable that the city people applieded with their hands, and the Outsway folks pounded on the floor with their well-shod feet. The protean star of the evening hastened from the Town Hall to the sick room to carry the news of the triumphs of the night to the invalid. Both laughed; then beto cried; it is just as easy to shed tears for in as for corrow.

"I trull to confess one thing," and the sick with no that was part of a let at the control of time to the action of the billed in the next tone to the of Picker and the control of it was wrong, but we were so hard up."

The little red-headed woman let out a merry post of augicer. There upon the invalid forced a smile, and exclaimed ;

"But you are just as bad as I am; you fooled the people."
"Oh, no; indeed I did not."
"You didn't," was the incredulous interruption.

" Certainly not; I am Charlotte Crabtree, the resi Lans at the stage!"

FALL BONNETS FOR WOMEN.—A very pretty bonnet for dressy occasions, has a flat crown, fitting close to the head in the back, with a very wide, very flaring brim. One of this shape is in velvet of the shade of green called verdigris, trimmed with coquilles of point applique lace, supported by noeuds of velvet ribbon, same shade; the flaring brim is lined with crepe, in ane-mone pink, shirred, and a wreath of soft roses, same shade, forms the face trimming; strings of velvet ribbon, coming from the back, tie under the

Another new shape is a modification of the Marie Stuart bonnet exceedingly becoming to some faces.

The fashion of having the bounett or hat match the restume, making a complete ensemble, is again a lamade, and the fast lady with ordinary ingenuity and taste can supply horself with several, to match different as turns, at surprisingly small expense.

Toques, bordered and trimmed with fur to match the cloak or costume, and other contraction, but elegant is becoming. A Problem toque.

are of simple construction, but elegant, if becoming. A Russian toque—pointed in front—with a border of the heavy, short, close-clipped ostrich-feather trimming, and ornamented with round pompons of the same, is extremely chic, especially in all black. Toques are entirely of wings, one laid over the other around the crown, and several standing at the proper angle in front, supported by velvet bows.

Galloons of chenille, combined with metal beads, form an effective border on velvet bonnets of a darker contrasting shade.

Chantilly and point lace barbes are used on velvet bonnets and hats. The rounded ends have a fine, invisible wire attached to make them stand in They are arranged in a graceful bow, or to resemble a butterfly, the ends forming the wings.

One pretty round hat of black velvet has large jet ornaments, in shape of a palm leaf, let in around both brim and crown, giving an open-work

How To CLEAN IVORY .- Ivory ornsments are quickly cleaned by brushing them with a sharp, not very new toothbrush to which a little soap is given; then rinse in lukewarm water. Next dry the ornaments and continue to brush till the lustre reappears, which can be increased by pouring a little alcohol upon the brush. Should the article have become yellow, dry it in a gentle heat and it will regain its original appearance,
