A HEROIC NURSE.

Among stories of the heroism of nurses and doctors at the front is one recorded on the authority of a giant Ulster trooper. He said:

Who is she? Heaven knows her name! But she's one of the grand lot working here as nurses. She's only a lassie, eh; but when many of us were gassed, and nearly done for, being as heavy as sacks of potatoes, when helpers were short, as so many of us had to be fetched, she stood to her guns amid the awful sights and did her very best! She carried Mellroy there to the ambulance; she worked like a Trojan; one poor chap actually died in her arms as she was carrying him! For weeks she's been going backwards and forwards night after night, through awful areas of "gas," and one time she never closed an eye for thirty-six hours! Her hands were bruised and bleeding. I saw them myself. And when she brought the last load to the hospital in the car, they tell me she tumbled down where she stood, that tired she was!

"Her name, and where she comes from? I don't know! We chaps here just call her 'The Angel,' and leave it at that."
