

Canadian Conveyancer, and Handbook of Legal Forms. By J. Rordans. Second edition. Toronto. 1867.

This concise volume contains a selection of the forms of deeds and other legal instruments in common use in the Province of Ontario. The precedents have evidently been drawn with much care, and as they embrace almost every form necessary to the transaction of the business of every day life, they will be found very useful not only to the professional man, but also to the public generally. The book is well printed and strongly bound, and in every way well worth the price.

Selected Extracts.

THE REV. MR. SPURGEON ON ORGANS.

“Mark this, we have had nothing novel to attract this multitude; nothing by way of gorgeous ceremony; there is not even the swell of the organ; I declined its pealing notes, lest we should seem to depend in the slightest degree from a thread even to a shoe latchet, upon anything but the preaching of the gospel. The preaching of the cross is enough to draw the people, and enough to save the people, and if we take to anything else, we lose our power and shear away the locks which make us strong.”

—Extract from the Watchword.

PARAMOUNT AUTHORITY OF SCRIPTURE.

I have lived to see the greatest plague on earth—the contemning of God’s Word, a fearful thing, surpassing all other plagues in the world; for thereupon most surely follow all manner of punishments, eternal and corporal. Did I desire for a man all bitter plagues and curses, I would wish him the contemning of God’s Word, for he would then have them all at once come upon him, both inward and outward misfortunes. The contemning of God’s Word is the forerunner of God’s punishments; as the examples, witness in the times of Lot, of Noah, and of our Saviour.—Luther’s Table Talk.
