2. If no changes have been made, what are the requirements for the construction of such buildings?

[Translation]

Hon. René Tremblay (Postmaster General):

1. There has been no basic change in the Post Office policy within the past 24 months with respect to the regulations and requirements governing the construction of Crown-owned Post Office Buildings. It is still required that a Post Office be classified as a Semi-Staff Post Office before a request is made to the Department of Public Works for the construction of a Crown-owned building.

As part of the Supplementary Federal Government Winter Construction Program, during the past two winters a number of small Crown-owned buildings were erected for Revenue Post Offices in those locations in certain designated areas and areas of high winter unemployment.
