The Poetical Works of William Motherwell,

WITH MEMOIR BY JAMES M'CONECHY.

A NEW EDITION, WITH LARGE ADDITIONS.

"The Poems of William Motherwell have an indisputable title to being reprinted among the other choice volumes of western poetry which have lately issued from Paisley. Without being one of the great sons of song, Motherwell had within him a spark of the true bardic fire; and at certain rare and favoured moments he sang with exceeding sweetness and pathos."—Scotsman.

"Mr. Gardner of Paisley has added to his already extensive list of handsome reprints, an edition of Motherwell, one of Scotland's minor poets, who exhibits more genuine originality and power than most of those who have owed their inspiration to Burns."—London Daily News.

In Two Vols., Crown 8vo, Cloth, (386—458 Pages), with Engravings and Facsimile, 12s. 6d. Large Paper, 21s.

The Poems of Allan Ramsay,

WITH LIFE, APPENDIX, AND GLOSSARY.

"The present edition forms one of the Series of Reprints of standard Scottish works which Mr. Gardner of Paisley, has made it his speciality to produce. In execution, it presents all the excellent qualities which characterise the preceding numbers of the Series."—Athenæum.

"Than this no neater or more complete collection of his works, with the memoir, and the quaint but elegant essay, could be desired, either by the student for reference, or by the less critical lover of RAMSAY'S muse for simple delectation."—Scotsman.

"Mr. Alexander Gardner is rendering a great and valuable service to English literature by his admirable series of reprints. His editions of Scottish and other authors who may now be regarded as classics are simply beyond praise, whether we regard the outward and visible presentment of the book, the nature of the critical work by which the various authors are introduced, or the faithfulness of the text. There is no edition extant of the popular Scottish poet, Allan Ramsay, which can be compared with this. All the authentic material that can be collected is here presented to us."—International Review.
