conceive their Interest requires the Operation.

As the unexpected Conquest of Cape-Breton raifed the Reputation of the British Naval Force beyond what it had been during the then and prefent Administration, it was natural for the Ministry and their Friends to enhance its Importance, not becaufe they really thought it of Importance, but because the Belief of it contributed to exalt their own Reputations, and to create an Opinion in the Publick, that there was an Intention to purfue British Measures only, in the future Operations of the War, which had been 'till then, too vifibly purfued on on a different Principle. But what was thus propagated only to amufe the Publick, was not only fwallowed, but digested by the Populace, who feldom examine the Truth of any Affertion, or the Rectitude of any Measure, if the Pill be but gilt with Specioufnefs and Plaufibility.

1

s hi o c slt h - t n nil - I e

Thus came Cape-Breton to be thought of fo great Confequence, that for a time, I don't know whether it might not have been fafer for the Ministry to cede the Isle of Wight to France, than yield up that of Cape-Breton; fo dangerous it is to instil vague and false Notions in the Minds of an undifcerning