

348. They will, in cases of unusually severe rain or wind storms that are liable to affect the safety of the road, pass over their sections ahead of trains, and KNOW that the track, bridges and culverts are in safe condition, and report to the Superintendent and Train Master. When necessary the entire force should be detailed to watch the road.

349. They must remove all combustible material from the vicinity of the tracks, bridges and buildings, and promptly extinguish any fires that may occur along the road.

350. They must observe the condition of the telegraph lines, and when wires are found crossed or broken or laying on the ground, make temporary repairs, and report to the Superintendent and Train Master from the first telegraph office as to instructions.
