received in subscriptions. The legislation in regard to village settlements, under the Settlement on Lands Act of 1893 (Victorian), provides for allotments of from one to 20 acres at a nominal rent—not less than 12c per acre—on condition of bona fide settlement. Homestead associations are also provided for by an act of the same colony.

QUEENSLAND.
Queensland has also attempted to promote village communities by offering inducements under the Co-operative Settlements and Communities Land Settlement Act of 1893, and to promote labor colonies by providing, in the same act, for areas of land not exceeding 10,000 acres being vested in trustees with power to grant a subsidy of £1000 ($5000) to a labor colony. The Government has at present, believe, under consideration the amendment of this act in the direction of giving more liberal facilities for settlement under these con-
