London, July 23.—Bradford, a big nanufacturing city, is experiencing similar sensations to those which were Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson Comfelt in America when the statement was published that in Chicago it occasionally happened that a man fell into a vat and got converted into canned meat or sausages. But Bradford has much more reason to feel uncomfortable. There is some doubt whether such grewsome things ever happened in Chicago, and if they did-well, it was fresh meat, anyhow. It is something much worse that has horrified Bradford. The badly decomposed body

mands Fleet Which Guards English Shore.

London, July 23.-In the recent British naval maneuvers, which approached more nearly the conditions of actual warfare than any previously undertaken, the commander-in-chief of the fleet which was supposed to be defending the coasts of of a man has been taken from one of England against the attack of the enemy, the resorvoirs which supply the city was Admiral Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. Unless it be Jackie Fisher, there is no admiral on the active list better qualified reservoir contained 1,240,000,000 pounds for the task, even had it been real war instead of make-believe war.

Admiral Wilson is known in the navy as the man who never takes a holiday, despite his 64 years. When on a cruise he seldom goes ashore at the ports his fleet or flagship visits, and then only to pay or return some official call. When he comes home to England, instead of going off on leave the first thing, like the other officers under him, he stays quietly on board the ship all the time it is in port. It is not the taste of the anchorite which fession more than anything else, and in his estimation time devoted to any other pursuit is time wasted. Consequently there is no officer more thoroughly up to date in all that pertains to naval war-

He has been through the Crimean and China wars, and the Egyptian and Soudan campaign. It was in the latter he showed himself a fighter of the first order, and won the coveted four cents' worth of bronze known as the Victoria Cross, with its hallowed legend, "For Valor." With his sword blade broken off at the hilt and his revolver empty, he pushed his way through the square at El Teb, and went for the enemy with his bare firsts. It is a thrilling story but it to the specific to the square at El Teb, and went for the enemy with his bare firsts. It is a thrilling story, but it is one which Admiral Wilson can never be got to tell himself, for, like nearly all brave and abe men, he is a modest one.
