Revival of Sport.

New York, Nov. 23—Sport governing podies, both amateur and professional, are preparing for an extensive revival of competition during the coming year. Reports from all sections of the country are to the effect that authorities and oranizations are already planning to renter the field of their particular activity and aid in re-establishing sport uner a better and broader basis than eached at any time previous to the war. Thile it is yet too soon to more than itline the possibilities, it can be said at many annual meetings of such bods which were expected to be perfuncy or omitted entirely, will now take 1 momentous interest in the reconstructon period which is coming in sport. It can be stated authoritatively that asjor and minor baseball leagues will sume business next spring. It is not kely that the game will immediately each the heights to which it had climbil when the world war first took toll of merica's most popular sport. It is ointed out, however, that baseball has stablished a record in weathering the reatest crisis of modern times with but it curtailing of the 1916 season by a onth. Problems relative to high railad rates, loss of certain star players in me critics must be solved, and this ill be accomplished between now and ext April.

Many of the officers of the golf and mnis associations are at present in serice, and it is impossible to secure define statements regarding the 1919 chamionship tournaments. Sentiment among he players and followers of these most opular sports are overwhelmingly in avor of a restoration or continuance of the title tourneys next season. Those uthorities who discussed the situation is individuals expressed the same sentiments, and it appears to be a foregene onclusion that pre-war conditions will e restored at the annual meetings scheuled January and February.

Baseball and rowing, two other maper sports at the colleges during the oring, will also be revived. If the S.

T. C. rules continue in effect until the close of the June term the games and races will be conducted along the same lines which now prevail in footall. College nines will be permitted play nearby rivals, and dual regattas ill be staged. If the restrictions are sed or entirely removed, more ambitus schedules will be arranged for the nes, and there is a possibility of a real of the eastern rowing classics. othall may be expected to resume its mal place in college sport next fall; by that time it is thought that the reges will have resumed their normal tions.

Winter Racing Next.

'e.w York, Nov. 22—Winter racing are more favorable auspices than curthe period of the war begins at vana and New Orleans next week. H.
