

of which Andrew was on the floor bleeding profusely.

I've bled the soul out of him, said Terence, breathless. A dirty little emerald like that to be taking the paw of me, and be going to be staling the very prison away from me. Come along quick, yer banner.

When we once more reached the Castle gate, there was a post-chaise standing there; and in the Governor's office was my friend Mr. Chandler, the wreck of the smart superior I had last seen. There were great gaps in his row of shining teeth, his tall hat was knocked into the shape of a pancake; his neat frock coat was hanging in tatters at his back.

O, man! he groaned, as I came in; how could you leave me in the hands of those barbarians? See how I've been treated! Why I was mobbed in that horrible place! Why did you suffer that man to drive away and leave me?

How could I help it? said I. Haven't I had desperate work to keep my own prisoner? Look at my face; it is blood stained, certainly. Look at my prisoner; his head was a mass of bruises. If I hadn't fought to the death I'd have lost him.

And is this the way they generally go on about here said Chandler.

Pretty much about, I said.

Then I'll never return to that horrible place, never. I'll go straight back to Somerset House and tell 'em they must send a prize fighter to take charge of the district. I shall report very favorable of you McAlister, and your desperate courage.

So he did, I am glad to say, and I got my district soon after, and a rise in salary, and married Katie Stewart. Terence and I were fast friends from that time, and when the old grandmother died I helped him to emigrate to America, where I hear he's doing very well in the public line, but I never met with such another adventure.—Be gravia.
