

POETRY

BAPTISM.

Thou know'st my boy, while we lowly are kneeling!
Before the sole Refuge where sinners flee,
For there is the sight of solicitude steading,
The voice of devotion is rising for thee,
Sweet bud, in thy beauty and innocence swelling!
Believing yet trembling, we come to receive A promise, a covert of safety, repelling The blast of the noon and the blast of the eve.
The bosom, where now thou reclinest may shield thee A shelter, a rest, through thine in-fancy's span;
But all unavailing and helpless to shield thee
From ills that must darken the pathway of man.
The snare is before thee, the pang and the sorrow,
The breath of syren, the voice of the rod,
The crime of to-day, the despair of tomorrow,
And all that can sever the soul from its God!

Thou smilest my babe on the stream that is stealing Like dew o'er the rose of thy innocent face :-
Oh! thus may the Saviour, his mercy revealing, Thy spirit refresh with the waters of grace!
And thus unresisting and meek as we view thee, Receive thou the unction that comes from above,
And welcome thy Lord if he deign to renew thee An heir of his kingdom a child of his love.

Now triumph and honour thanksgiving and blessing
To Him who was slain that the sinner might live!
The gift of his grace which we joy in possessing,
He gied to receive, and receives but to give.
This armour of proof we are girding around thee;
-For we have been wounded and foiled in the fray-
And oh, may the helmet of salvation have crowned thee, A glory and guard through life's perilous day!

To Dress an Old Partridge.
Pluck and truss it with the legs inward; then tie it up in a bladder, or else cover it with a stiff paste of flour and water. Put it into salt and boiling water, and let it simmer gently during three quarters of an hour. In the meantime, beat a cabbage, and a piece of breast of bacon so as to draw the salt from it. When the cabbage is bleached, put it into cold water; then squeeze and press every drop of water from it. Now remove the partridge from the bladder or paste, taking care that every drop of gravy that runs from it fall into the stewpan into which it is to be put. The bacon is then placed at the bottom, and the partridge upon it, on this again a few fried sausages; then two or three onions, a bunch of herbs consisting of parsley, thyme, and bay-leaf, a seasoning of pepper, salt, pounded allspice and mace. Now put the cabbage over this with two or three carrots. Add a little fat broth, with which from time to time you may moisten the cabbage, over which put a slice of fat bacon.
The fat skimmings of the broth or soup pot would be the best. The contents of the stewpan must be made to boil up at first, and then to simmer gently during three hours and a half. When taken up, put the bird at the bottom of the dish, and the bacon near it, and over the whole, the cabbage garnished with the carrots. This preparation is served by the French perdrix au chou, and at Paris is one among the esteemed dishes. If made with a brace of old partridges, the cabbage and other ingredients must be in proportion.

Conjectural Knowledge.—The following brief but pithy dialogue occurred lately on the Epsom road between a cockney and a countryman:

Cockney. I say Bill my good fellow, vich is the way to Epsom.
Countryman. How did you know that my name was Bill?
Cockney. Vy, I guessed it?
Countryman. But how did you know that I was a good fellow?
Cockney. Vy, I guessed it?
Countryman. Then, guess the way to Epsom.

Irish Sagacity.—An Irishman, who some time ago was committed to Knutsford house of correction for a misdemeanor, and sentenced to work on the tread-wheel for the space of a month, observed, at the expiration of his task, "what a deal of fatigue and bothe-ration it would have saved us poor craters, if they had but invented it to go by stame like all other water-mills; for burn me, if I have not been going up stairs for this four weeks, but never could reach the chamber door at all at all."

We have seen a miniature cannon, which, as a specimen of neat and ingenious handicraft, is well worth the attention of the public.
It is complete in all respects, having a bore and touch hole; the gun is made of steel, the carriage of gold, and the wheels of silver; and the whole weighs only the 29th part of a grain! The workmanship is very beautiful, but cannot be distinguished except through a powerful magnifying glass, the size of this warlike engine being only about that of a common pin's head.

Instances are constantly occur-ing, which strongly exemplify how wrong and wicket it is, to make light of that Being from whom we derive our existence, as the following circumstance will clearly show Three men, who a few days since met together at a public house, in this city, joking over some ale agreed to go and get measured for their coffins, which was accordingly done, and singular as it may appear, but awful to say, they have all three since paid the debt of nature, and now occupy their new and last habitations, having survived their joke but a few days.-- Exeter pap.

It is not legal to sentence a Spanish Nobleman to punishment for life; therefore the Supreme Court of Malaga have ordered a young nobelman, convicted of murder, to work in the galleys for one hundred years and a day!

There is a tradition of Quin, one night on his way to dress for Othello; looking through the curtain, and seeing a very thin pit, exclaiming, "Hang 'em, they are not worth blackening one's face for; I think I shall play it white."

The Hat. In Lord Clarendon's essay on the decay of respect paid to old age, he says, "that in his younger days, he never kept his hat on before those older than himself except at dinner."

It is said that the extent of Gas Pipe laid down in the city of London, is equal to 1100 miles.
