At the foot of the American Falls are the usual ice mounds, formed by the falling spray, while the irregular surface of the 'bridge" itse'f is glazed over for hundreds of feet around. The path across the ice and the mounds about the fall were black on the twelfth with pleasure seekers all the afternoon, and far down in the evening; many clambered to the ton of the highest mound, but the ascent was accomplished with great difficulty, and in The view from the top of this mound was well worth an effort to obtain. Facing southward, on the immediate left, high up was the American Fall, pouring its neverending flood into an abyss filled and darkened with a cloud of spray. Further forward, and across the rushing, boiling, foaming green water, was the great Horse Shoe. Facing northward, on the left again, was first the laughing, shouting, leasure seeking crowd, then the icebridge, and then the rocky bank of the Canada shore. Further forward and hanging away up in the air, was the frail the right, at the top of the bank, was a row of human heads peering over the stone wall guarding the edge of the precipice for hundreds of feet at Prospect Point. If he was making the trip with a conveyance the Ferry Road, the veichle would meet nim again at this point. The Park was chronged with people, and is well worth a visit at this season of the year. The ice cenery is very interesting. The archway leading down to the point, as well as the trunks of the trees, are drawn out, so to peak, on the side nearest the fall to two or three times their natural size. One must see the place to understand its pe cularities and appreciate its beauties. Pass ing around Goat Island, the ice scenery is even grander than at any other point.
