

McKINLEY IS DEAD.

retaries Wilson and Hitchcock drove up together, and with bowed heads entered the house. Governor Odell of New York drove up with his secretary...

The services had already begun when there was a clatter of hoofs down the avenue, and four high stepping black horses came into view...

The family had taken leave of their devoted one before the others arrived. Mrs. McKinley had been led into the chamber by her physician...

About 10 in all saw the remains. Some were so overcome with grief at the sight of the thin, placid countenance that their frames shook in convulsive sob.

Just before 11 o'clock President Roosevelt entered, coming into the room from the rear through the library. He held himself erect, like a soldier, his left hand carrying forward...

The pastor was at the door leading into the hall, a station whence his words could be heard at the head of the stairs.

When the singing ended, the minister read the eloquent lesson betraying the funeral service—the 18th chapter of the First Corinthians.

Ob God, our help in ages past, Our hope for years to come, Our shelter from the stormy blast, And our eternal home.

His prayer was as follows: We, thy servants, humbly beseech Thee for manifestation of Thy love as we come into Thy presence.

to our troubled souls, oh God, and give to us in this hour of unutterable grief the peace and quiet which Thy presence only can afford.

Heard our prayer for blessings of consolation upon all those who were associated with him in the administration of the affairs of the government.

All present joined in the Lord's Prayer as the minister repeated it. After the benediction those in the room stepped back and the funeral director was about to place the casket in the hearse.

The president, the cabinet and the others followed. Mrs. McKinley and the members of the family remained. The widow had passed through the casket bravely and without breaking down.

The friends and public associates of the dead president all had opportunity to view the remains before the service began.

As the funeral cortege moved south through Delaware avenue, toward the city hall, it passed through a throng of people filling the streets and crossing streets and crowding house tops.

Circled about the bier was a distinguished company. To the left stood President Roosevelt, with bowed head and solemn face.

8000 LYNNCHINGS IN 20 YEARS. Students of Governmental Beliefs Problem 11. Past Hatched Point Where Dramatic Measures Will Be Taken.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Students of government believe that the lynching problem is fast reaching that point where drastic measures will be taken by Congress to check it.

Records kept for 20 years show 3,120 lynchings. This year, up to Aug. 30, 101 lynchings took place. The biggest "lynching" year was 1892, with 286 lynchings. In every state but the seven of one or more lynchings during the last 10 years, except Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah.

The state having the largest number is Mississippi, with 33 to its discredit. Texas comes second with 27, and Louisiana third with 23. Georgia had 19, Alabama 18, and Tennessee 18. The northern states holding the record for lynchings is Indiana with 36. But 20 northern territories ever or excel this, Indian territory having 18 and Oklahoma 18. Illinois has had 17 lynchings in 16 years.

Of the 10 victims of lynch law during the present year, 70 were colored, 23 white, one Indian and one Chinese. Murder was given as the cause for 27 lynchings; attack on women, 20; murderous assault, 6; race prejudice, 5; arson, 3; attempted assault, 4; 12 lynchings were attributed to "suspected cattle stealing, 3; suspected killing cattle, 2; leading a train, 1; train wrecking, 1; leading a gambling house, 1; resisting arrest, 1; robbery, 1; insulting white women, 2; assisting a fugitive, 1; "whitewash," 1; mistaken identity, 1.

HE GETS MIXED. (From the Philadelphia Telegraph.) A well-known Oxford don has a reputation for mixing up the initials consonants of his words with results that often prove startling to his hearers.

In a sermon he once said: "I have in my heart a half-warmed fish," meaning, of course, "a half-formed wish." Again, at a meeting he alluded in a speech to "our quarry of but he meant an affectionate reference to the royal visitor of the university—not a criticism of any hard-worked college official. Blank told me yesterday she had left off stealing at the doors" is another instance which needs no explanation.

THE POPULATION OF LONDON. (From the National Review.) The population of London, according to the authoritative and careful calculations of Mr. Weldon, published in the December (1900) issue of the Royal Statistical Society's Journal, amounted to only 5,000,000 in 1801. This figure had doubled itself by 1841; in 1891 the total reached 5,445,000, and by 1901 was probably 6,250,000. The area, included, it should be said, is not precisely that of the census returns, so that the figures, though based upon the census returns, differ considerably from them. But practically we may say that in the lapse of a century the inhabitants of London multiplied sixfold. This enormous population, greater than that of many European States of the second class, is compressed within a space of about 130,000 acres, or, say, 200 square miles.

ACCEPTED THE CALL. A telegram was received Saturday from Rev. H. H. Roach of Annapolis accepting the call tendered him by the Epworth League of Baltimore. He will become their pastor. Mr. Roach will, in all probability, enter upon his new duties here within a very short time, as the present pastor, Rev. F. J. Stackhouse, preached his farewell sermon yesterday. Great regret is expressed by the members of the church at the departure, as he has been instrumental in having the new church built and in placing the finances upon a firm basis.
