Trade Union Tyranny.

The history of the world affords eximples of a good many kinds of tyranny-kingly, priestly, civil and military, but nothing has been known of a more tyrannical tendency than modern labor associations. The steel melters of Sheffield have, at a general meeting, adopted a resolution which is, perhaps, unique, even in the annals of trade unionism. Two years ago the men succeeded in getting Saturday's work reduced from three to two "heats." As the melting pots can be used three times, the throwing them away when only twice used entailed a considerable loss upon the masters. Messrs. Jessop recently offered their men a premium to work a third heat on Saturday, and they agreed to do so. The officials of the union, who had not been consulted, became aware of what had been. cials of the union, who had not been consulted, became aware of what had been done, and a general meeting was held on Thursday night to consider the conduct of Messrs. Jessop's men. The meeting, after protesting against the introduction of the three heat system on Saturdays, and pledging itself to use every means to stop it, passed the following motion unanimously: "That this meeting hears with disgust the names of men who are not only sacrificing their own principles, but also those of the whole of the men in the trade, and hereby informs them that in the eyes of all those men they will carry with them the brand of Cain, and that from heuceforth if they continue the practice they will be considered unworthy of sympathy and regard."

The rope walk is stationed in Portland and is one of the most interesting manufactories to visit in this city. The works were formerly carried on by Messrs. Ames

The manufacture of rope Last night the Island detachment came on alone is a large industry at this establishment, but the manufacture of mats and matting is decidedly more interesting. There are at present seventeen looms for weaving the matting and foundation of the mats, and preparations are being made for building several more. The cocoa matting that has been manufactured has met with a ready sale, as this is John M. Walker, Esq., who has just the only place in the Dominion where the returned from Halifax, reports the health work is done. It is now proposed to try the market in the United States, and a
