(For the C. P. Herald.) TO W. P. L., ESQ., OTTAWA. What ails that muse of thine, That sung so sweet and clear? In that exalted pleasing strain, True crities love to hear.

Has poortith chilled her wing, When soaring forth to fame Why has she ceased her songs to sing Pray tell us what's to blame.

Or has your cold neglect Sent her abroad to seek. From kinder bard some due respect, With blushes on her cheek? She need not blush for shame,

For noble is her mien-Well worthy your high favoured name, The best day you have seen. Whene're she tunes her lyre,

And sports among the strings, All hearts are touched with kindred fire. That hear the songs she sings. If friendship is the theme,
As friends on earth are few,

She wakes us from life's fitful dream, To hope that ours are true. If true love asks a part, 'Tho rough its course must run,

Or joineth two in one. Departed worth embalmed, In her sweet incense lies, And from such honor'd, hallow'd dust, Immortal names arise.

She gently probs the wounded heart,

Well may you court her smile, When she on you looks down, And strife by each endearing wile, To gain from her a crown. MAGGIE PEEBLE. Bagot, C. W., Dec., 1862.

In the holy arms of Sabbath All the city lies asleep, And from out their twilight curtains One by one the young stars peep, While the sweep of angel pinions Murmurs music low and deep.

I am looking for my window, Peace and beauty fill my eye But I see a tall tree near me Lift its bare arms to the aky, And I turn from all this beauty, Sadly turn away and sigh.

All its leaves but one have perished In the cold and wintry air, And that lone leaf trembles, clinging Near its heart as in dispair, While the branches closing 'round it, Point to heaven as if in prayer.

What a world of wild emotions Through my spirit surge and swell! Oh! I know a heart whose picture In that lone tree seems to dwell, And the scene is sadly whispering Thoughts that language should not tell
