of the two) be sold and they be used to pay for the Maggie. Since this met the approval of all the "ups", that was the decision. Murray House set up for sale by tender on October 15th, so if you want to buy a lovely old house in need of a few repairs, in a great downtown location, in a easy walking distance of the university) here is your hopefully for many years to come. Although long range plans are for Maggie to become a graduate residence, the implementation of that plan has been delayed once again, and nine first year students are among us (several of whom had a lovely nocturnal singing lesson last week). This year we again have students from the full range of frosh to doctoral candidates - locals and foreigners. About two thirds of the students cook their own meals, while the others brave the elements and walk up the hill to brave the food.

It looks to be a good year for Maggie, with more good years in the future.

A lot of people up the hill don't know anything about us - even that we exist - so come on down for a look, and a tour round, and maybe you'll be glad you did.

Maggie-Jean Chestnut House

year the Florence Murray was home to about twenty or and graduate students, of them overseas students, from Greece, Ireland, Iceland and Trinidad. The Maggie-Jean Chestnut House had something more than fifty students, ranging from first year to students, and also had a percentage of overseas students. The only differences between the Houses were size and the presence of some larger students in Maggie. Both are off-campus, Maggie is at 811 Charlotte St. and Murray is on a lot behind at 806 George St. They both had male and female residents and they were set up so that the residents could cook their own meals. Those who found the prospect of doing their own cooking more satisfying than that of Beaver House could buy meal cards and live up the hill. These Houses are very popular, and it is unfortunate that now twenty-three people can live this way. However - there is still Maggie, and we are alive and well.
