

Through crests of the hoarse tide swing,
Clove sheer the sweep of her bow;
There was loosed the ice-roaring of spring,
From the jaws of her prow, —
Of the long red swan full wing, the long red swan full wing.

BLISS CARMAN

