On July 2—the funeral of the late George Bursnell was held at the family residence and was attended by a large number of friends. The deceased was born in Kelso Scotland in 1826 and came to this country with his parents when three years old. They first settled in Blehemin Township, then later they moved to Paris, where she resided for 67 years. Her maiden name was Jane Davidson, and she was married to George Bursnell in the year 1847. He predeceased her six years ago. Mrs. Bursnell was a member of the Presbyterian church and always interested in her Master's work. Rev. R. G. MacBeth conducted the services. Five daughters and one son are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother; Mrs. H. Qua, Toronto; Mrs. Gordon Qua, Paris; Janet and Bella at home; Miss Maggie, of Buffalo, and Richard of Dayton, O.

A highly esteemed resident in the person of Mr. George Stewart, 61 somewhat suddenly on Saturday. For some time he had not been enjoying the best of health and had gone away for a change. He came back a week ago feeling much better, but during the week took a relapse from which he had never recovered. The deceased had only been a resident of Paris for six years, having purchased the harness business from A. Cowell. Mr. Stewart was a strong Conservative, member of the Baptist church and held the office of Master Workman in the A.O.U.W. lodge here. Rev. Mr. Reid conducted the funeral service at the home and the remains were taken to his former home in Leamington for interment, the services there being conducted by the Masonic order. Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. Stewart and her daughter, Miss Edna in their sad bereavement. The members of St. James' church fraction of a second before the hammer fell upon the cartridge and the bullet that was intended for Tarzan's heart whirled harmlessly above his head.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN OF TARZAN

Before the Russian could fire again the ape-man was upon him and had wrested the firearm from his grasp. Captain Dufrane, Lieutenant D'Arnot and a dozen sailors had rushed up at the sound of the shot, and now Tarzan turned the Russian over to them without a word. He had explained the matter to the French commander before Rokoif arrived and the officer gave immediate orders to place the man in irons and confine him on the cruiser.

Before the guard escorted the prisoner into the small boat that was to convey him to his temporary prison Tarzan asked permission to search the cabin and to his delight found the stolen papers concealed upon his person.

The shot had brought Jane Porter and the others from the cabin, and a moment after the excitement had died down the greatest of the surprised Lord Kensington, Tarzan joined them after he had taken the papers from Rokoif, and as he approached Jane Porter introduced him to Kensington.

"John Clayton, Lord Greystocke, my lord," she said.

The Englishman looked his astonishment in spite of his most herculean efforts to appear courteous, and it required many repetitions of the strange story of the ape-man as told by himself, Jane Porter and Lieutenant D'Arnot to convince Lord Kensington that they were not all quite mad.

At sunset they buried William Cecil Clayton beside the jungle graves of his uncle and his aunt, the former Lord and Lady Greystocke. And it was at Tarzan's request that three volleys were fired over the last resting place of "a brave man, who met his death bravely."

Professor Porter, who in his younger days had been ordained a minister, conducted the simple services for the dead. About the grave, with bowed heads, stood as strange a company of mourners as the sun ever looked down upon. There were French officers and sailors, two English lords, Americans and a score of savage African braves.

Following the funeral Tarzan asked Captain Dufrane to delay the sailing of the cruiser a couple of days while he went inland a few miles to fetch his "belongings," and the officer gladly granted the favor.

Late the next afternoon Tarzan and his Waziri returned with the first load of "belongings," and when the party saw the ancient ingots of virgin gold they swarmed upon the ape-man with a thousand questions, but he was smilingly obdurate to their appeals, he declined to give them the slightest clew as to the source of his immense treasure.

"There are a thousand that I left behind," he explained, "for every one that I brought away, and when these are spent I may wish to return for more."

The next day he returned to camp with the balance of his ingots and when they were stored on board the cruiser Captain Dufrane said he felt like the commander of an old time Spanish galleon returning from the treasure cities of the Aztecs. "I don't know what minute my crew will cut my throat and take over the ship," he added.

The next morning, as they were preparing to embark upon the cruiser, Tarzan ventured a suggestion to Jane Porter.

"Wild beasts are supposed to be devoid of sentiment," he said, "but nevertheless, I should like to be married in the cabin where I was born, beside the graves of my mother and my father and surrounded by the savage jungle that always has been my home."
