On Thursday evening Robert Holmes was driving home a team, attached to a heavy wagon, the property of Thomas Dixie, and when at the Corner of Isaac and Joseph streets the clevis bolt came out. He stopped the team and went back to pick it up. One of the whiffletrees slipped off and struck one of the horses, causing them to break into a mad run. Holmes succeeded in catching the hind end of the wagon, and clambering in he regained possession of the lines. The pole had dropped to the ground, and he had a highly exciting trip to the residence of Geo. Campbell, where he succeeded in stopping them. Nothing about the vehicle or harness was broken, but the feet of both horses were badly cut. Veterinary Peat dressed the wounds so that they could be driven home, but both will be laid.

The Underlying Faith. The Underlying Faith.

What is it that all the sweet and truehearted and deeply religious men and women, whose lives go down to the great taproot of reality, are coming to agree in caring for more than all the differences, that separate them? They agree in their underlying faith—that this is somehow God's world, that it is a world in which God's world, that it is a world in which it is safe, and only safe, to do right, that its supreme law is good will, that in con-crete terms the type of life known as "Christlike" is the imperative and win-ning type, te conform to which lifts every son of man to be a child of God. Here is son of man to be a child of God. Here is the common faith of the new century, destined to merge needless and petry de-nominational lines into a larger unity as surely as the old provincial and colonial igalousies are already merged in the ab-sorbing and grander life of the nation.
