Ancient and Modern

Years ago there lived in Athens, the capital of Greece, a most extraordinary man named Pericles, who, according to his lights was a democrat of democrats. His object in the political business of the nation, to which he belonged was to benefit the people in such measure that they would applaud his name whenever and wherever it appeared, notwithstanding that they had no public press in these days. Still this man, Pericles, like some of his more modern types, was always in a position to fool the people. Eloquence of the modern demagogue style fooled the people of Athens just as freely as the eloquence of Mr. Coaker beguiles the populace of Newfoundland to-day, and the result will be exactly, in the case of this Dominion, as it was in the days when this early demagogue, Pericles, seduced the inhabitants of the Grecian Province which believed in him to their utter loss and obliteration. History goes on to prove the foregoing.

Shakespeare was most profound in his knowledge of this man, who had a most evil effect on the people, and in his play "Pericles," the immortal poet shows the Greek tyrant to be exactly that which he is, a demagogue capturing the fancies of the people and leading them to extremes; in other words Pericles is the archetype of Coaker, and the warning of Antiochus may well be applied to the dictator of Newfoundland:—

"Touch not upon thy life. For that's an article within my law As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expired: Either expound now or receive your sentence."

So it is up to Coaker in this twentieth century to expound his policy or receive his sentence, because "few love to hear the sins they love to act," and our good friend—heaven save the mark—Coaker—is such an enemy of the people whom he affectionately desired to make wealthy that his real explanations may rather be heard than heeded, for

"Vice repeated is like the wandering wind, Blows dust in others eyes to spread itself," and the policy of Mr. Coaker is of that nature, because he is blowing dust into the eyes of the men of Newfoundland in order to further the insane policy which he has fathered, and which will, if persisted in, bring ruin and desolation to this island.

Pericles was a democratic agitator. His objects were exactly identical with those of Mr. Coaker. As a matter of fact Pericles has been duplicated in the person of this democratic demagogue who to-day rules Newfoundland with a rod of iron, and who, apparently, has so frightened those who are opposed to him that they tremble like sheep when he approaches near their flock, and they are quite willing to be led to the slaughter or the shearing accordingly as it pleases the butcher. Pericles introduced the system of payment for the performance of public duties. In that Mr. Coaker has postdated him, for everybody knows that Mr. Coaker insisted upon the irrational advance in the sessional pay of the members of the House of Assembly, in order that the followers of himself should be sufficiently recompensed for their wise and able services to the Colony. In foreign politics the aim and object of Pericles was imperial. Ditto with our modern Pericles, yept W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. His object is to subordinate foreign markets to his own will and wishes so far as the sale of codfish is concerned, and he has done this so well that the whole Dominion is crying out in protest against his usurped domination. There are other aspects in connection with the life of Pericles which could be, with truth and reason, applied to Mr. Coaker, but for the present we shall leave them for further reference, if need be.

Avoiding the Regulations.

We have, as yet, received no answer to our question asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on September 14th, as to whether it was not true that a member of the Advisory Board had chartered and sent a vessel to Canadian-Labrador to load fish for the foreign market, thus avoiding the regulations? We again call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to this charge and request him to say whether the report is true or not.

Queen's College Re-Union.

The Biennial Re-union of the Alumni of Queen's College, to which the Alumni of the other colleges were invited, took place at the College on Saturday at 1 p.m. After a most sumptuous repast had been partaken of, His Lordship the Bishop proposed the health of His Majesty the King, which was responded to by the signing of the National Anthem. The Bishop then proposed the toast "Floreat Domus," and took occasion to refer to the fact that the College had entered upon a new stage of development, inasmuch as the campaign had met with a great measure of success. It was not intended that the College should simply go along in the same groove, but that it should grow and develop to meet the growing needs and demands of the times. He forcibly argued for the continued existence of the College, and said that the Alumni of the College were doing splendid work in the Diocese.

The Rev. G. S. Chamberlain, the senior priest of the Diocese, to whom the Bishop referred as "youngest man in the Diocese," responded with his well-known felicity of expression, reviewing the history of his connection with the College and his subsequent work as a priest in various parts of the Diocese. He closed his magnificent speech with a most eloquent and rousing peroration, expressing the hope that the College will, as a result of the Campaign, "wear the laurels of victory upon its plumes."

Mr. Chamberlain was followed by the Rev. Canon Smith, Episcopal Commissary, whom the Bishop called "the historian of the Diocese," a title he rightly deserved. The beloved Canon spoke most feelingly of the College and of his work as a priest in the remote and unwieldy portions of the Diocese, and concluded by thanking his hearers for their hearty reception, which, he said, was "a comforting kindness to an old man."

Canon Bolt proposed the toast "Our Visitors" and spoke of the value of gatherings of this kind, humorously remarking that they constituted a sound argument for an annual Synod. He hoped the visiting clergy would return to their various parishes and missions with very pleasant memories of this Re-union.

Canon Smart replied on behalf of the visitors, and said that he had fully intended to be present at this gathering, no matter how he got there. Now that the college doors have been re-opened, they must be kept open by the determined efforts of all.

Mr. H. E. Knight, one of the College's warmest friends, and a lecturer for many years, spoke most kindly of his associations with former students, and hoped that he had helped to make Literature helpful to them, if only as an incentive to reading good books. He urged the clergy to back up the College, which has such a good record, and is capable of supplying all the clergy required for the Diocese.

The Rev. H. J. Read, Rural Dean of St. George's, spoke of the bond of fellowship which has ever existed between all Queen's Alumni and the Alumni of other Colleges, and always felt like making Queen's his home when in St. John's.

Dr. Pacey was the final speaker, and took advantage of the opportunity to tell of the progress of the campaign both in the Outports and, so far, in St. John's. He referred at length to the efforts which various parishes and missions had made and of the enthusiastic way in which they had entered into the campaign. He said that Canon Smart had thrown a vast amount of energy and enthusiasm into the campaign, and was a tower of strength to the cause. Dr. Pacey thanked most sincerely the clergy who had done so much for the campaign, the ladies who so kindly provided such a bountiful feast, and the press, which has given so generously of its space to propaganda for the campaign. He concluded by reminding his audience that the campaign is not by any means over. Indeed it was only just begun, and all must buckle down to work and see it through to a glorious conclusion.

With the sending of a message of affectionate greeting to the late Principal, Rev. C. H. Barton, a most happy and inspiring re-union was brought to a close. Floreat Semper Queen's College.

An Honest Citizen.

On Saturday last a well known citizen found a little child, who had strayed from its home, and brought it to the police station, and shortly afterward the same citizen again returned to the station with a handful of money, which he had picked up. The money is awaiting its owner at the lockup. The child was taken away by its parents Saturday evening.

Queen's College Endowment Campaign

CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Sunday, Sept. 19, (16th after Trinity), saw the second Sunday's work in connection with this great campaign. The early Eucharist with its large number of intercessors, was not the least important part of the day's efforts. Those who approached the Theological College (Queen's College) campaign by the avenue of the great Eucharistic Intercession, saw the marvelous possibilities opening out before the institution, and were braced for arduous and self-sacrificing service for the cause.

The morning service at 11 o'clock will long abide in the memories of those who were privileged to be present. The large number of ladies and officers of the C.L.B. at the service gave the preacher of the day a unique opportunity of influencing the rising generation of churchmen. The Rev. Andrew Tulk, Rector of Burin, a graduate of Queen's College, was the preacher. It is no exaggeration whatever to state that if a tree is known by its fruits, then Queen's College as an institution for training men for the sacred ministry, is too fruitful and valuable a tree to be cut down or left to perish of neglect. "Why has such a man been kept in the back-ground?" "A splendid effort!" "A convincing plea earnestly and eloquently put!" "If Queen's College has many sons who hold such a brief for their Alma Mater, and can plead her cause so effectively, she will never go under." These are a few of the comments made as the large congregation dispersed after the service.

The preacher rivetted the attention of the whole congregation including the ladies of the C.L.B. and we know that ladies are proverbially restless, as he unfolded his theme. His sermon was an appeal based on the grounds of the great present need for men to serve in the sacred ministry owing to the stressful days in which we live—days which ring with an insistent challenge for a new focus. The demand of the present is for a readjustment of the old order so as to make impossible the past shadows and to hand on to future peoples the high ideals of fellowship and service gathered from the cataclysm of the past.

The Church is in a unique position to accomplish this task because she has proved herself a supernatural force in the great upheaval, and her appeal for means to provide a more effective ministry comes as a call from God. His call voices itself in a request to provide more priests to minister in the large areas of the Diocese so that the hungry sheep of the flock might be fed and it was an echo of the past in which the vision of those great Apostles of the Church, Bishops Spencer, Kelly, Field and Jones played so large a part and into whose constructive policy the Theological College was woven. The preacher referred to the unique opportunity of the present to voice the call of the Church owing to the presence of the C.L.B.—young soldiers of the Cross—and exhorted those present to live living members of a living cause and to carry into every day life a personal consecration to a great cause. It is possible to give the answers of indifference and emotion, but only the Christian answer of service of which the Cross is so supreme an example is worth while. This answer alone could meet the new and gladden the heart of Him who died that men might live.

At St. Thomas's.

At St. Thomas's morning service yesterday, Rev. H. J. Read, Rural Dean of St. George's and Rector of Channel parish, delivered an interesting discourse dealing particularly with the need of support for Queen's College. He referred especially to Rev. J. T. Richards' circular letter and also to the need for priests in his own deanery, which covers a stretch of 200 miles, some of the settlements within that area having only two or three services during the year.

The service at night was attended by a large congregation despite the downpour of rain. The service programme was in shorter form than usual, and instead of the regular sermon which was to have been preached by the Rector, there were three addresses delivered by the Bishop, Revs. Canon Smart and Dr. Jones. These addresses directed special attention to Queen's College and the campaign being conducted in its behalf. The Rector of St. Thomas's spoke briefly and dealt with the secret of the Church's success, holding that it was to be found in the opportunities opening for the better accomplishment of the Master's will and work. Canon Smart referred to several present priests of the Church who, having faced many difficulties and drawbacks in youth, had seized their opportunity and were now honoured and successful workers for the Church. He made a stirring plea for the continuation and upbuilding of Queen's College, whose existence had been more than justified by her contribution of men to the sacred ministry in this Diocese.

The Bishop, who was the last speaker, endorsed all that had been said in behalf of the College. His Lordship referred to the need of more men and thought they must come from his own Diocese, since former avenues of supply had been interfered with, chiefly by the war. England, Canada and other large countries had been denuded of men, and additions to the ranks in the Dominion from outside sources were not to be expected. His Lordship hoped and believed that from the Church of England people in Newfoundland would come such generous response, and to properly establish the College and pave the way for a future supply of clergy, whose work would more than repay any outlay now made. There were present at the service about twenty of the clergy, besides those who occupied seats with the congregation.

Police Court.

A bookkeeper was charged with appropriating the sum of $206 from a letter sent to a well known business firm by a lady of Harbor Main. Mr. W. J. Higgins appeared for the accused and asked for bail. It was granted in the sum of $4,000, $2,000 self and two sureties for $1,000 each. A drunk was released.

Richard Grey, charged with breaking and entering the store of Franklin Agencies, pleaded not guilty. The charge was changed to one of larceny. Sergeant Furlong doing night duty gave evidence and said he found a pane of glass broken in the window, and a rubber boot, an empty rum bottle and the accused on the premises. The prisoner was put in the witness box and stated that on Saturday evening he drew five dollars to procure a boarding house, as it was too wet to go to his country residence. He was unable to find lodgings, so he went to Franklin's and laid down on a pile of hay. During the night a noise was heard by him and he supposed it was fellows fighting. The bottle found on the premises did not belong to him, as he did not drink anything since Regatta Day. The accused, addressing the Judge said: "Look here yer honor I'm losing me work to-day, because I slept last night on a pile of hay."

The evidence for the prosecution did not convince the Judge of the man's guilt, so he was allowed to go.

We understand that a great number of dances are to be held now the cool evenings are with us. Gentlemen should provide themselves at once with a pair of DANCING SHOES, and not find themselves in the same position as last season, when they left it until the last moment, only to find that there was not a pair of Dancing Shoes left in St. John's. There is now a small shipment of all leather Dancing Pumps opening at BISHOP, SONS & CO. LTD., with a full range of sizes from five and a half to nine.
