

SELF-RAISED

BY EMMA D. M. SOUTHWORTH

"Yes, sir," answered Katie, hesitatingly. "I believe in presentiments; though what you mean by sighing what's-it-was, I don't know."

"Never mind, Katie, you believe in presentiments."

"Indeed I do, and got reason to too. Why, law, the month before Mrs. Merlin, as was Miss Claudia's mother, died, I experienced the most astonishing—"

"Yes, I know, you told me all about that before, Katie."

"Why, so I did, to be sure, sir, when you were lying wounded at the house!"

"Yes, Well, Katie, some such feeling as that of which you speak, vague, but very strong, impels me to say what I am about to say to you."

"Yes sir. Listen, chillun!" said Katie, in a voice of such awful solemnity that Ishmael again smiled at what he was inclined to characterize as the absurdity of believing in presentiments.

"You three are going to Europe in attendance upon Lady Vincent."

"Yes sir. Listen, chillun!" said Katie, keeping her eyes fixed upon Ishmael and nudging her companions right and left with her elbow.

"You will be all of her friends, all of her native country, all of her."

"She is going among strangers, foreigners, possibly rivals and enemies."

"Yes sir. Listen chillun!—now it's a-comin'!"

"She may need all your devotion. Be vigilant, therefore, watch over her, care for her, think of her, pray for her; let her honor and happiness be the one charge and object of your lives."

"Yes sir. Listen chillun! you hears, don't you?"

A sharp reminder right and left brought out the responses "yes" and "yes" from Jim and Sally.

"And when you are far away you will remember all this that I have said to you; for, as I have told you before, I feel, deep in my spirit, that your lady will need your utmost devotion," said Ishmael earnestly.

"You may count on me for one, Mr. Ishmael, sir, not only to devote myself to my lady's service, but to keep the old woman and Sally in mind to go and do likewise," said Jim, with an air of earnest good faith that could not be doubted.

"That is right. I will take leave of you now. Good bye! God bless you!"

And Ishmael shook hands with them all round, and left them and walked back to the cottage.

The next day, being the Sabbath, he went with Hannah and Reuben and the professor to the church. He had almost shrunk from his duty, in his dread of meeting Claudia there; but she was not present.

Judge Merlin's pew was empty during the whole of the morning service.

When the benediction had been pronounced, and the congregation were going out, Ishmael was about to leave his pew when he saw that the minister had come down from the pulpit and was advancing towards him to speak to him.

He therefore stopped and waited for Mr. Wynne's approach.

There was a shaking of hands and mutual inquiries as to each other's health and then Mr. Wynne invited Ishmael to accompany him home and dine with him.

Ishmael thanked him and declined the invitation, saying that he was with friends.

Mr. Wynne then smilingly shook hands with Hannah and Reuben and the professor, claiming them all as old friends and parishioners, and extending the invitation to them.

But Hannah pleaded the children left at home, and with many thanks declined the honor.

And the friends shook hands and separated.

Very early on Monday morning Ishmael and his gray-haired retainers prepared for their departure for Washington.

Ishmael left two commissions for Reuben. The first was to make his apologies and adieu to Judge Merlin. And the second was to send back the horse, borrowed for the use of the professor, to Mr. Bradenell at Bradenell Hall. Both of which he promised to execute.

After an early breakfast Ishmael took leave of Hannah, the children, and his venerable dependent, took the dog, and seated themselves in the light wagon that had been geared up for their accommodation and were driven by Reuben to Shelton, where they arrived in time to catch the Express on its up trip. Reuben took leave of them only half a minute before the boat started.

They had a pleasant run up the river, and reached the Washington wharf early on Wednesday morning, where Ishmael took a carriage to convey himself, servant and his luggage to his lodgings.

As they drove through the streets the professor, seated on the front seat, bobbed about from right to left, looking out at the windows and gazing at the houses, the shops and the crowds of people. Nothing could exceed the surprise and delight of the intellectual but child-like old man, who now for the first time in his life looked upon a large city. His enthusiasm at the sight of the Capitol was delicious.

"You shall go all through it some day, as soon as we get settled," said Ishmael.

"There is only thing that I am doubtful about," said the professor, "and what is that?"
