physique seemed to be bronze, like his skin; and still he preserved the same calm, courteous expression of countenance throughout. Even his tormentors were forced to acknowledge that his was a scalp that would grace the boldest warrior's belt. At last they paused, wearled with their fiendish exertions; and then the young brave spoke. His deep, guttural tone were steady and measured, though low from exhaustion.

"The sun is yet high," said he. "Are you wearled already, that you will leave the Leaping Deer-Wolf to go to sleep?". They were his last words; in a short half-hour his scalp hung at the girdle of Steep-Rock, who took him; and the Leaping Deer-Wolf was well on his way to the happy hunting-grounds where the grass never withers and the water never fails, and the buffalo feed in countless thousands over the dreamy prairies of over the dreamy prairies of highest pitch of refinement, though its tendency must unquestionably be to render the nervous system extremely susceptible, provides at the same time a check upon its sensibilities, in the selfommand which it exacts from its dis-iples. Total impassability is the chief talification for the charmed circle. Are r the charmed you must by no mean your hands. Are you disexult and clap your hands. It is neither shall you swear. A loud laugh is a solecism only second in enormity to a wet cheek. To be seen with the latter, it is needless to observe, would condemn the sufferer at once. If you would be respected, you must never subject yourself to pity; if you would have influence, you must never seek for sympathy. Lady Gertrude bore up bravely enough through a wearisome round of morning visits, preferring to undergo the platitudes of Lady Olivia and her dowager friends, rather than endure her own society any more in the open carriage. She was absent, no doubt, and answered somewhat at random, not listening very somewhat at random, not listening very attentively to the conversation; nor can I affirm that she was any great loser thereby, inasmuch as it consisted chiefly of remarks concerning the weather, the medical man who was first favorite for the time, and the crush last night at Lady Pleid's, all delivered in admonitory and by no means approving spirit. It was a great relief to get home to the canary and the armchair in the boudoir losts in the canary and the armchair in the boudoir losts.

Till ring when I want you," said Lady

Gertrude to her officious maid, bustling in with the indispensable cup of tea; and then she locked the door and put off the heavy armor she had worn so bravely for hours, and laid it by for a season, not to be resumed till the melee tonight, and bathed her wounds, so to speak, encouraging them to bleed freely now that the pressure was withdrawn.

She was not longer the frigid fashionable young lady, with cold eyes and a haughty smile, regardless of all alike; but the helpless, yielding woman, burying her face in her white hands, and weeping as if her heart would break.

It did her good though. She learned more about Lady Gertrude in one of those paroxysms of sorrow than she had known in all her life before. The frost must break up with storms and rain, and the floods burst wildly down, carrying before them many a tangled fence and artificial embankment, ere the saturated soil can teem with life and hopes, ere the violet can peep out, and the meadow don her grass-green kirtle, and soft-eyed Spring smile welcome upon earth once Spring smile welcome upon earth once

CHAPTER XIX.

We left Gilbert in a most uncomfortable frame of mind, grieved and bitter, and angry above all with the person he lest loved. It is, perhaps, the mood in which we are least disposed to take a rational or even a sane view of our position. A man who thinks himself ill-used is invariably selfish; he cannot take interest in any subject but his grievance; and if it should be one on which good taste forbids him to enlarge, he relapses into a state of sudden dejection, and justifies himself for being ill-tempered by assuming that he is bored. Ladies in a parallel attack enjoy the privilege of pleading ill-health; what out neighbors cail "migraine" is an invaluable refuge, and "the nerves" are today an excellent substitute for what our grandmothers substitute for what our grandmothers denominated "the spleen." But with the rougher sex such excuses are simply absurd; a fellow cannot ask you to believe he is nervous, with the appetite of an Eskimo and the color of a plowman; while the plea of a headache, unless it be a convivial one, you laugh ruthlessly scorn. There are two courses for him to scorn. There are two courses for him to pursue—either to sulk by himself until he gets better, or to rush into every description of amusement and dissipation till he forgets his own annoyances and his own identity. Another and the only effectual remedy—namely, to busy himself in fulfilling his duties and doing good—is so rarely adopted, that I think it unnecessary to recommend it, although certain sufferers who have honestly tried to youch most implicitly for its efficacy. treat supercrs who have nonestive tried to youch most implicitly for its efficacy. The fashionable cure, however, would seem to be continual change of scene, and a course of what is humorously called was simply because he did not know It was simply because he did not know what on earth to do, that Gilbert found himself in the back of Mrs. Montpellier's box at the opera, endeavoring to adapt his manners and conversation to the locality. Hurt he was, and sore, to think that he should have been duped by his own infatuation; that he should have flung himself so recklessly away without an equivalent. His pride was lowered; even his vanity was wounded; above all, his trust in his own better feelings was shaken; and herein he showed the nice judgment and close reasoning of a man in love. It was just a fortnight since he had seen Ada, a woman with whom it was his dearest wish to spend an eternity, and that one fortnight seemed to have made an irremediable breach beto have made an irremediable breach be-tween them. Moreover, were he so de-termined, there was no absolute im-possibility to prevent their meeting to-morrow or the next day, or some time within the week; but no—he preferred to torture himself by imagining barriers morrow or the next day, or some time within the week; but no—he preferred to torture himself by imagining barriers which did not exist, and a thousand improbabilities as unjust to her as they were derogatory to him.

Therefore he exerted himself to appear gayer and better in spirits than usual in the eyes of Mrs. Montpellier, and those glittering orbs saw through him at a glance; while their owner resolved, woman-like, to have his secret ere he was many hours older; also, woman-like, we must in justice add, to assist him by all means in her power, and stand by

Event Is in Progress on Rowing | John Paul, John Weld, Club's Green.

Weather Ideal and Entries Unusually Numerous.

London Rinks Did Well in Preliminaries and First Round of Trophy Match.

HE SEVENTH annual tournament of the Western Ontario Bowling Association was opened at 2 p.m.yesterday on the beautiful lawns of the London Bowling Club, under especially favorable auspices. Perfect weather, a record list of entries, the largest attendance since the inception of the tournament, superb greens, all combined to make the bowlers as happy as mortal man could wish. The depressing rains of the preeding days had given way to genial him sit in the chair close behind her, leaving the place of honor opposite for such comers and goers as she had no wish to detain, and began to feel her way insidiously, as they do, with innosunshine and a clear sky, and it seemed as though old Nature had repented her former frowning aspect and had "Off duty tonight, Mr. Orme? Your mother's box, I see, is empty, and no Lady Gertrude." put herself about to redeem herself with the brightness of her smile.

Under the careful supervision of Curator Sparrowhawk, the grass has been him.
"I haven't seen Gertrude for a week," he answered; "I should have dined with them on Sunday if I had not been engaged to you. You see, you make me forget all my duties." He laughed as he get all my duties." cut and rolled and cut and cut and rolled and rolled and cut again, the trauntil by comparison ditional velvet with which it has been compared was as rough us through his glasses.

"And very absent and disagreeable you were," said she, crossing her two pretty forefingers as she laid them on the cushion. "Do you know, I think you have an atrociously bad temper, Mr. Orme, or else you're very unhappy about something or somebody. Come, I'm an old friend; what is it?"

He smiled somewhat bitterly. He was thinking how kind everybody else was to him, how they courted his society, and appreciated whatever good qualities he might have; why should one so neglect and despise him? He came to the front of the box, and leaned his elbows on it, still scanning the house with an abstracted, vacant gaze; and one sitting far back in an upper tier was devouring far back in an upper tier was devouring absent and disagreeable you the cedar block pavement on Dundas street. The result was a stretch of grass whose equal could not be found in Western Ontario, affording space for sixteen greens.

The grounds presented a bright and beautiful scene during the afternoon. Thirty-two rinks, or 128 players, were seen busily occupied in their play. The rinks were surrounded by a large nuniber of spectators, many of them members of the fairer sex, while others occupied the commodious balconies which are a welcome addition to the cosy everything with a pink hue, and was impressing, as it were, his picture on her brain, for she was resolved never, never to see him again; at least, not till he was fairly married to his cousin, and she could look back calmly and even laugh at the impossible fancies of which she had allowed herself to be the dupe. So, in the meantime, it was doubtless judicious to give way to the influence of clubhouse.

the most representative one yet held in this city, but it is also the most representative one held in Ontario today. At the recent meeting of bowiers at Toronto, 64 rinks were present, but they represented only about half a dozen towns. Eighteen different cities or towns are represented by rinks at the present tournament, while many individual bowlers are expected to come from these and other places for the singles and the doubles. Forty-three rinks entered the trophy match, which is eleven in excess of last year's entries, and seven in advance of the At Chicago— R. H. E. THE TURF.

THE GRAND CIRCUIT. Cleveland, July 23. - The Grand Circuit races opened here a day late because of the downpour of Monday. The $3,000 stake for 2:09 pacers was the banner event, and was decided only after an eight-heat contest, making it the longest race that has been held this dropped back the next two heats to others. Directum Spier, a 4year-old, was always 5 to 2. Geers' Dandy Chimes was a 2 to 1 choice. He caused a mild sensation in the second heat by breaking in rounding the first turn and falling back five lengths behind the leaders. Then Geers pulled him down and was ahead again before the turn was reached. The track was spongy, and at least two seconds slow all the afternoon, and no record-breaking time was hung out. Eight thousand spectators were on hand, a larger crowd than has ever gathered at a Cleveland opening day. Sum-

Of the modern woman is health by exercise. It's an excellent fad, provided that it is always remembered that exercise eannot cure womanly diseases. Indeed, where such diseases exist exercise is apt to aggravate the condition rather than to help it. The first step toward establishing the general health is to establish the local I womanly health. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases which undermine the general health. It establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness When these are cured, backache, headache and nervousness are things of the past. The universal testimony of weak and sickly women, cured by "Favorite Prescription," is this: "It has made me feel like a new woman."

"My wife has used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicine, and I never saw such results," writes A. B. Haynes, Esq. of Aurora, Lawrence Co., Mo. "It was wonderful in its work. We had used lots of medicine, also had one of the best used lots of medicine, also had one of the best physicians in Aurora, but my wife got no better; we heard one pitiful groan after another, day and night. A friend handed me a copy of Dr. Pierce's book, the Common Sense Medical Adviser, and after reading the testimonials of Dr. Pierce's successful treatment, and seeing that the cases described were similar to my wife's, I bought for her a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Frescription. Before she had taken all of the medicine she was up and helping to do the work. She has taken three bottles and is now about well. Has better health than she has had for years."

of St. Thomas, with his sturdy, stalky figure, his dark face with white moustache, and his long grey hair blowing in the breeze. "What he doesn't know about bowling isn't worth knowing," said a London member of the association. Governor Moore is the father of bowling in St. Thomas. Although he took up the sport comparatively late in life, he is recognized as one of the leading bowlers of the west. He learned the game in 1896, and interested other St. Thomas men in it. Their initial efforts were handicapped by poor grounds, but Governor Morre later had first-class greens laid out at his own residence, and that gave the sport a decided impetus. At one time the St. Thomas Club had 110 members, but gold took some of them away. The present in excess of any previous year. The membership is over 70, and the indications are that this number will be largely increased next year. Governor Moore is of the opinion that bowling follows: Patrons-John Labatt, Lonis the squarest game that is, and that don; Frank H.
