

Real Duke To Show Movie Fans How An Aristocrat Acts

BY JAMES W. DEAN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Duke of Manchester is really serious about his intentions of entering the movie world to show the world how a real aristocrat looks and acts.

This department's correspondent in London recently interviewed the Duke of Manchester on the subject.

"There is no mystery about my reasons for entering a photoplay career," said the duke. "There is no claim in England so affected by conditions since the war as the old nobility."

"It is no longer possible to live on our estates with the present burden of taxation and the only way for us to make ends meet is to go into the labor market and compete with others for what is going."

"I was not trained for the life that now seems necessary. Movie acting is the only thing I am able to turn to for the living necessary to my position in life."

"Nowhere in the photoplay is there more room for improvement than in the portrayal of the life of the aristocrat. The tendency is to make the average lord look like an imbecile."

"There are none better qualified to show the aristocrats as they are than those who have been born in the purple themselves. I shall be glad to find a new career in the movie world if for no other reason than it will enable me to correct popular conceptions of how a duke behaves or how he looks."

The duke is negotiating with a leading American producer. He says he is asking a large salary to renounce his present life.

Cryptic remarks might be made about the duke choosing the movies as an easy field in which to turn up a fortune. Passing that, we consider his reaction on the movies.

It may be interesting to note that a real duke doesn't leave his spoon in his coffee cup, as film dukes often do.

A duke in the movies generally is tossed out with a sash across his waistcoat, a monocle, spats and a stove-pipe hat, even if he is taking an

The Duke of Manchester. He says he will show the movie public that nobles neither look or act like imbeciles, as the screen usually portrays them.

after-breakfast constitutional. Probably the Duke of Manchester will appear in golf togs or some such informal occasions. Real dukes do that, you know.

And he may not wear a drooping coffee-strainer or a misplaced eyebrow for a mustache.

Further, the duke may appear as hero of a movie, a character of noble purpose, of serious intent. The Duke of Manchester is right when he says the movies make aristocrats appear as imbeciles.

However, the most interesting thing will be a comparison of the manners and ethics of a real aristocrat with the etiquette of the average screen player. The latter is often conspicuous by its absence.

lently pictured scenes and scenery with the quaint, romantic flavor that is considered typical of New England. Careful attention to details add much to the charm of the picture. For instance, one could never imagine the signboard on the "Balden House" being anything but a genuine, weatherbeaten signboard which had seen long service over the years of an actually-existing dilapidated village inn somewhere in the actually-existing New England.

Of course, the plot of "Way Down East" is melodramatic, but not offensively so, as in most melodramas, and a melodrama of any kind if pictured by Griffith would be genuine art in any event.

Probably for a long time "Way Down East" will continue to appeal as it does appeal to all classes, including first of all the great "plain people," who see in it reflected their own hopes, tears, trials and foibles.

BROADHURST PLAY ATTRACTS CROWD

Grew Players Handle Difficult Comedy Drama With Success.

"Bought and Paid For," which is being offered at the Majestic Theatre this week attracted another large audience Thursday night. The famous comedy-drama by George Broadhurst is well presented by the Grew Players, especially the two stars of the company, Miss Virginia Mann and Robert Hyman.

Miss Mann as the wife of a millionaire, overly fond of champagne, has ample opportunity to display the ability as an actress that she undoubtedly possesses. The audience Thursday night showed their appreciation of the work of Miss Mann, giving her unstinted applause.

Robert Hyman, as the millionaire clubman, has some difficult lines and situations to handle, and makes the most of every one of them. He is particularly good in the second and third acts.

The work of Miss Gertrude Gustin should not be overlooked. She helps provide a lot of the comedy that has made "Bought and Paid For" so well and favorably known. Miss Gustin is becoming a great favorite with Majestic audiences.

Rickey Secret, who as James Gileay, a shipping clerk, looks after the part of a young man with an exaggerated idea of his own importance, and does it well. Mr. Secret shares the male honors of the evening with Mr. Hyman. Duncan Edwards, a great favorite with those who make a point of attending the Majestic Theatre each week, has little to do in this particular offering, but makes the most of a small part as does Miss Elizabeth Fox.

AT THE ALLEN. Of the many women in screenland who essay to become real movie producers there are but few who do not fail ignominiously. Constance Talmadge, starring in "Wedding Bells" at the Allen Theatre, the current half of this week is one of the few.

There is a style about Constance Talmadge that compels admiration from even the most hardened male cynic. In addition to this she is careful in that she does not commit the unpardonable error of over-doing things. "Wedding Bells" is particularly adapted for not only the star but for her principal support, Harrison Ford. It is one of those possible marriage and counter-marriage stories that keeps the distracted lover, Ford, real busy getting out of peculiar situations throughout the film.

The production, while free from obnoxious or suggestive scenes, is brimming over with good, clean comedy. Harold Lloyd, slapstick comedian extraordinaire, has long since been awarded his just due—a seat with the "Number Please"—is just such a matter of Harold's twenty minutes of sheer nonsense that will convince one of the expediency of such action.

With Tom Santschi in "The Sagebrush Musketeer," the audience is treated to one of those gun-fighting, hard-riding tales of the west during the days that are no more. The film is well received.

Billed as the star event of the week at Allen's is little Dorothy Waters, who, although but nine years of age, has already earned the distinction of having been "shot" for the screen with such celebrities as Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. Dorothy is a singer and dancer of considerable merit, and is winning due appreciation from good houses this week.

On Friday evening she will meet the Allen patrons at the special armistice celebration dance to be staged in the lobby of the theatre directly the evening performance is concluded.

AT LOEW'S.

Betty Compton, who attained some prominence as a feature actress in the "Miracle Man," is starring the latter part of this week at Loew's in a Chinese drama entitled "At the End of the World." She is ably supported by the film favorite, Milton Sills.

The plot is laid in Shanghai, and the picture, which is well handled with regard to detail, shows excellent photography.

The film list includes Jimmy Aubrey in "The Nuisance," a Vitaphone comedy, a Pathe Weekly and Foxes in Florida.

N. D. Ippolito, a member of the orchestra, delighted with a saxophone solo "Serenade From the Millions of Atquing."

In the vaudeville Link and Phillips gave a good country dialog, indulging in witty patter.

Ferguson and Sunderland delighted the audience with funny songs and original dancing, the male member of the team being clever in his everyday impersonations.

Classical pieces were rendered by the De Maria Five, with a Venetian background, who gave vocal and instrumental selections of considerable merit.

AT THE PATRICIA.

Antonio Moreno plays the leading role in "The Secret of the Hills," which is the feature film showing at the Patricia Theatre Friday and Saturday.

This offering is adapted from the novel of the same name, and while delving in mystery is not overdone. The scenes are laid in England, and action predominates throughout the entire plot.

As Fenton, a young member of London Society, Antonio Moreno accidentally runs into a mysterious murder, and incidentally meets a charming young lady. He resolves to determine the identity of the assassin and bring them to justice, not reckoning that he will win a bride while fulfilling his self-imposed task.

"The Secret of the Hills" loses none of its value by being filmed, and this is due to the excellent cast supporting Antonio Moreno with Lillian Hill in the leading feminine role. Adventure, love and mystery are combined in this vehicle to make a clever hour's entertainment.

A scenic film and a Century comedy complete the screen program.

Four young men present a vaudeville act which is liberal in quantity and fair in quality. This bill includes singing, dancing and instrumental numbers, with a female impersonation thrown in for good measure. The opening song is presented in an original manner, and the quartet was well received Thursday night.

O. C. PRESENTS GUNNERS WITH MEMORIAL POPPIES

The Second Brigade Machine Gunners held one of their extra parades last night and had a fair turnout only.

Lieut.-Col. Coles, O.C. of the brigade presented the members of the unit with poppies, the memorial flower for today, which is the third anniversary of the signing of the armistice.

The unit will hereafter parade on Tuesday and Friday nights. Members of the unit are urged to attend the drills next week, in view of the inspection by Sir Henry Burstall, inspector-general of the Canadian forces.

Nuts buried by squirrels are the most important means of extending the black walnut groves of this country.

35th Wedding Anniversary Celebrated by Fire Chief and Wife.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

CHATHAM, Nov. 10.—Fire Chief and Mrs. Pritchard of the city are celebrating their 35th wedding anniversary quietly today. They were the recipients of many messages of congratulations throughout the day. Fire Chief Pritchard is a past president of the Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association.

V. K. GREER NEW SCHOOL INSPECTOR

Was Unanimous Choice of the Board To Succeed Late C. B. Edwards.

V. K. Greer, for some time assistant inspector of the London Public Schools, was unanimously appointed senior inspector at Thursday's meeting of the board of education.

Mr. Greer, who succeeds the late C. B. Edwards, was nominated for the position by Trustee Edwin Smith who spoke of Mr. Greer's sterling qualities. The motion was seconded by Trustee Thomas Rowe, who also spoke highly of the work done by Mr. Greer.

"One inspector cannot do the work alone," said Mr. Rowe. "It will be necessary to get an assistant who will be suitable in every way, and we must pay strict heed to the man that Mr. Greer and the department recommends for this position."

Mr. Greer, who was absent from the board room during the discussion, was called in and made acquainted with the fact that he was the new inspector. He thanked the board for their action and promised as efficient service as he could possibly give.

Mr. Smith, in his original motion, recommended that Mr. Greer's salary be $4,000 per annum and should start on November 1. Mr. Rowe, however, did not agree that the salary should be included in the motion. He thought that it was a matter for No. 1 committee, and this important phase of the appointment will be attended to by that committee.

MOTHERS! BE SURE YOU GET YOUR FREE PACKAGE TODAY

A Vapor Treatment in the Form of a Salve. Applied Over Throat and Chest, the Body Heat Releases the Ingredients in the Form of Vapors. Relieves Croup and Cold Troubles Without the Necessity of Internal "Dosing."

Local Druggists Are Each Giving Away 50 Free Packages, 6 of Which Are Full 50-Cent Jars.

Twenty-five years ago in a little North Carolina town, a druggist discovered a process of combining the old-fashioned remedies—Camphor, Turpentine and Menthol—with certain volatile oils, such as Eucalyptus, Thyme and Juniper, so that, when applied externally, the body heat would vaporize these ingredients. These vapors, inhaled all night long, carry the medication, with each breath, direct to the air passages and lungs.

Today this vapor treatment, Vicks VapoRub, is almost universally used throughout the south in preference to internal "dosing." It is quick in its action, and what is more important, particularly to mothers with small children, it is applied externally and hence does not disturb the most delicate stomach. Colds are easiest treated at the beginning and Vicks makes the ideal preventive for the entire family.

This preparation comes in salve form and its action is two-fold. Externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, taking out that tightness and soreness in the chest. Internally, the vapors inhaled loosen the phlegm and open the air passages. For croup or colds just rub a little over the throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. One application often prevents a night attack of croup.

For very severe chest colds, tonsillitis, bronchitis or incipient pneumonia, hot, wet towels should first be applied over the parts, to open the pores of the skin and then use Vicks. For head-colds, asthmatic or catarrhal troubles a little Vicks can be rubbed up the nostrils or melted in a spoon and the vapors inhaled.

The manufacturers know that an actual trial is the best way to prove how valuable Vicks is in the home, and they have accordingly furnished each druggist in London with 50 free packages, to be given away on presentation of the coupon below.

"Way Down East" Back At Grand Wins Favor of "Plain People"

Musical Prologue and Singing of Rialto Quartet Add Much To Intrinsic Merit of Griffith Production.

"Way Down East," a simple story of plain people (to quote the explanatory subtitle), told for the stage by Lottie Blair Parker and pictured for the screen by Anthony Paul Kelly with the lavish excellence that usually characterizes a D. W. Griffith film, came back to the Grand Thursday for a three-day engagement.

It is the same picture that pleased thousands of theatregoers when it was shown at the Grand before, and Thursday many who returned to see it again were rewarded by the successful presentation of a beautiful prologue, scenically and musically first-class in all respects.

The singing of the Rialto Quartet, comprised by Wesley Roberts, Chris J. Pink, Percy King and Fred Downing, was greatly appreciated, and other special musical numbers were rendered by an augmented orchestra.

Richard Barthelmess and Lillian Gish are names that attract in themselves and the work of these principals is really above criticism. Among the supporting cast are Lowell Sherman, Burr McIntosh, Porter Strong, Kate Bruce, Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Creighton Hale, Edgar Nelson, George Neville and others who accomplish equally good impersonations of the many difficult character parts in the play.

"Way Down East," from the photographic standpoint is rich in excel-

WHY Is ORTH Selling Hundreds of OVERCOATS At Lower Prices? Figure This Out Yourself

You hear a lot about avoiding the Middleman's Profits and to buy direct from some store that is controlled by a "Chain System—or Unloading Manufacturers, Fad-Sellers and Miss-Fitters." Now be frank and read what others know to be facts:

"Expense" of doing anything adds to the cost, "doesn't it?" Now, can "Chain Stores" or "Unloading Manufacturers" rent a store, heat it, light it, employ sales people or buy cheaper advertising than any wide-awake individual business man," or can they buy better goods or at a lower price? No. Emphatically not. You'll find that well-known brands and genuine garments are sold as cheap to the smallest, as well as to the largest buyer. No good firm can have two prices. "Wholesaler or Retailer." Now you say probably they make their own goods. Yes, if they happen to do so they cannot make goods any cheaper than other manufacturers who have the very same overhead cost. Forget it, as it is getting old-stuff. Did Russia cut out the middleman? "LIVE AND LET LIVE" IS OUR MOTTO. Now then, folks here is how Orth wins. For genuine values in men's apparel, we buy from the largest collection of every good maker. The chain store salesman practically must buy and sell what his wholesale house sends to the store. He cannot choose the best values offered in the world collection of competition. "We can and we win." You know there are plums in every basket better than others."
